The 1986–87 Outlook

With Kenny Smith and Joe Wolf heading a cast of eight returning lettermen, the University of North Carolina could have another outstanding basketball team in the 1986–87 season.

But, the Tar Heels must offset a loss of size and rebounding power if they are to again rank among the best teams in the country.

Carolina has finished in the top 10 of the national wire service polls for six consecutive seasons, reaching the Final 16 of the NCAA Tournament each year. No other school in the nation has accomplished either of those feats. The Tar Heels were 28–6 last season.

However, three key members of that team have been lost to graduation—6-4 Steve Hale, 6-11 ½ Warren Martin and 6-11 ¾ Brad Daugherty. Daugherty won first-team All-America honors and then was the number one pick in the NBA draft. Hale, a second-team All-Atlantic Coast Conference selection, and Martin were also chosen in the professional draft.

"Obviously, we've lost a great senior class," says Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "When we were healthy last year, we had a great college team. We'll be a good team this year, but I don't know how we can be better than that.

"We found out what it was like to play without Hale and Martin late last year and we still had Daugherty then. Now we won't have any of those three."

With Hale, Martin and Wolf suffering a series of injuries down the stretch last season, Carolina lost four of its last seven games.

"Without Daugherty and Martin we will be a smaller team and it will be difficult to be as good a rebounding team as we were last year," says Smith. "In fact, rebounding may be my biggest concern about the new season."

Daugherty was the ACC's top rebounder over the past two years and Martin averaged 4.5 rebounds a game last season. Sparked by their play, the Tar Heels had a 4.8 rebounding edge over their opponents. In addition, Martin led the league in blocked shots although he was only a part-time starter and missed several games with injuries.

Even with the huge personnel losses, there is good talent on hand as Carolina shoots for a 13th straight NCAA Tournament appearance. That talent is headed by Kenny Smith, star of the United States' win over the Soviet Union in the World Championships last summer, and Wolf, who bounced back from late-season injuries to play sensationally in last year's NCAA Tournament.

Smith, a 6-3, 170-pound senior from Queens, N.Y., is heading into his fourth season as a starter in the Tar Heel backcourt. He averaged 12.0 points a game last year and handed out 210 assists as he won second-team All-ACC honors for the second straight year.

Smith has great speed which has helped in his defensive development. That speed and his ability to make good decisions on the fast break have keyed the Carolina running game for the past three years.

Kenny Smith may be the best in college basketball on the fast break.

Joe Wolf is a standout defender.

"Kenny became an outstanding defensive player late in his sophomore year and I expect him to continue to improve there," says Coach Smith. "I don't expect his role to change a great deal this year although I would like him to be more of a threat as a penetrating guard."

The 6-11, 230-pound Wolf is coming off a solid junior season. A senior from Kohler, Wis., Wolf was often over-shadowed last year by the play of Daugherty, Hale and Smith. However, he finished the season in sensational fashion. Although playing on a bad ankle, he grabbed 16 rebounds against Alabama-Birmingham in the NCAA Tournament second round and then had 20 points against national champion Louisville in the regional semi-finals.

Wolf ended the year averaging 10.0 points and 6.6 rebounds. He shot 53.2 percent from the field and did a good job defensively.

"Joe is a tremendous battler on the backboards," says his coach. "He showed overall improvement in all areas of play last year. He will be a key rebounder for us and one on whom we'll be counting a great deal defensively.

"I expect both Joe and Kenny to challenge for all-star honors. Fortunately, they're more concerned with how our team does."

Carolina will also be counting on leadership from those two, along with the team's other seniors, Dave Popson and Curtis Hunter.

In addition to Smith and Wolf, the Tar Heels return one other player who started late last season. That's Jeff Lebo, a 6-3, 179-pound sophomore guard from Carlisle, Pa., who averaged 9.2 points a game. Lebo could again team with Smith in the starting backcourt, but will also be Kenny's top backup at the point guard position.

Other possibilities at guard are Hunter, a 6-5, 190-pound senior from Durham, N.C., and Ranzino Smith, a 6-0½, 192-pound junior from Chapel Hill, N.C. Hunter's progress at Carolina has been slowed by a series of injuries. However, both he and Smith are capable of pushing for a starting spot.

Rounding out the backcourt candidates are senior walk-on Michael Norwood and freshman Jeff Denny.

Returning lettermen in the frontcourt are Wolf, Popson, and Steve Bucknall. Popson, a 6-10, 225-pound senior from Ashley, Pa., is a key figure. He is being counted on to shoulder some of the rebounding burden as well as to show improvement in other areas of play. Bucknall, a 6-6, 216-pound sophomore from London, England, saw spot action last year.

"We need our two sophomores, Lebo and Bucknall, to be more consistent than they were as freshmen," says Smith. "I'm hoping both have improved over last year."

A third freshman who saw action last season, 6-5 Kevin Madden, will not play this year. He and Smith have agreed he should sit out the season and concentrate on his studies.

Smith's first non-medical red-shirt at Carolina, Marty Hensley, must gain strength in order to be a factor this year. He's 6-9 and 210 pounds.

Completing the squad are three freshman frontcourt players—Pete Chilcutt, 6-8, 227 pounds from Eutaw, Ala.; J.R. Reid, 6-9, 244 pounds from Virginia Beach, Va.; and Scott Williams, 6-10, 214 pounds from Hacienda Heights, Calif.

"I'm pleased with this freshman group," says Smith. "As in most cases, the big men will be faced with many adjustments. The biggest may be simply learning to play against competent men their own size for the first time.

"There is no way any of them will be able to approach the play we got from Daugherty and Martin last year. If they were only playing against other freshmen, I wouldn't be worried. But, I'm concerned if they will be able to rebound against the experienced people in our league."

In choosing his frontcourt lineup, Smith has some flexibility because Wolf and the three freshmen all can play inside and outside and the three positions are very similar anyway. Wolf, however, will have to be the defensive center because of his experience and techniques.

"We could be a good defensive team if one or two of our freshmen can learn our system quickly and if our experienced people make continued progress," says Smith. "What we need is someone who could be a defensive stopper much like Hale has been in the past."

Carolina must also find a way to avoid the late-season injuries which have hit the team for the past three years. The Tar Heels cannot afford that in what promises to be a wide-open ACC race.

"The league is going to be unbelievably balanced," says Smith. "There's no clear-cut favorite this year. The top three teams of last season suffered severe losses, but all have good young players. I don't see a truly dominant team so all the games should be close."

The Carolina schedule is again difficult. In addition to their seven ACC road games, the Tar Heels also must play on the road against UCLA, Purdue, La Salle, Kansas State, Notre Dame and possibly SMU. In addition, they have home games against Marquette and Illinois, which could be one of the top teams in the country.

What Smith Says About . . .

The 1986–87 Season

"It will be difficult to be as good as we were last year when we had everybody healthy. I think we were a truly outstanding basketball club last season before we were hit with injuries. But, from that team we're missing Brad Daugherty, Steve Hale, Warren Martin and Kevin Madden, all of whom were instrumental to our success. We'll particularly miss the three seniors, as well as James Daye who did such a great job in practice.

"In Joe Wolf and Kenny Smith, we have two tremendous college players who are also good leaders. In addition, I think Dave Popson and Curtis Hunter will provide excellent leadership and improved play for us.

"We've received a lot of pre-season attention, but for the wrong reason. So much of that attention is based on our incoming class of four freshmen. We think the four will be very good student-athletes and will improve to become very good college players. While we need contributions from them, we don't anticipate any of them leading the team in any categories. We do hope at least one of the three big men can learn quickly to give us depth up front."

Strengths

"I think we'll be a good offensive team and we'll try very hard to be a good defensive team. As in all of my previous 25 years as head coach, we will look to fast break whenever possible. We will take good shots, so consequently my biggest worry offensively is the fact we won't have an automatic two points or a foul like we did last year when we got the ball to Brad Daugherty low. I think we will be a good outside shooting team, but I don't know to what extent we'll use the three-point play.

"I would hope we can be an aggressive rebounding team. But, in Brad Daugherty, we've lost the top rebounder in the Atlantic Coast Conference over the past two years.

"Overall, we could be a very good basketball team if our key people stay healthy and if we improve as the season progresses."

Concerns

"My major concern is that the players not believe the pre-season hype because we are certainly over-rated at this point. I want them to get better and feel they are getting better without being disappointed if we don't live up to what the recruiting writers have said.

"In the past, our defense has helped our offense in many ways and I hope that will continue this year. But, generally, your very best defenders are those with experience and we have lost three very good ones to graduation. I'm particularly concerned about our inside defense if we're using one of the freshmen.

"We've lost the shot-blocking ability of Brad Daugherty and Warren Martin. None of our three freshmen can compare with them as shot-blockers and, of course, none of them are as big as Brad or Warren.

"I'm always concerned about the 'chemistry' of each team because that's something over which you have little control. Unlike some other schools across the country, we've never had a problem here with seniors worrying more about pro careers than their college team. I'm confident that will again be the case which certainly will help develop the right kind of chemistry."

Kenny Smith

"Kenny will continue to do what he has been doing for us his first three years here and I think he will do everything even better this season. He does an excellent job on the fast break, not only moving the ball down court quickly, but also making the right play on the break.

"He has become a very sound defensive player. Last summer at the World Championships, Coach (Lute) Olson placed him on the opposing teams' good outside scorers and he did a fine job.

"Harley Dartt, our strength coach, says that pound for pound, Kenny is the strongest player on our team. I think that's indicative of his off-season work habits. I think he's just going to have a great senior year."

Joe Wolf

"In my opinion, Joe is vastly under-rated. I saw a pre-season basketball magazine in which Joe was rated as the 18th-best power forward in college basketball and just the fourth-best in the ACC. I find that hard to believe because he is a tremendous all-around player. He's smart defensively, he's an excellent rebounder and he can pass and score.

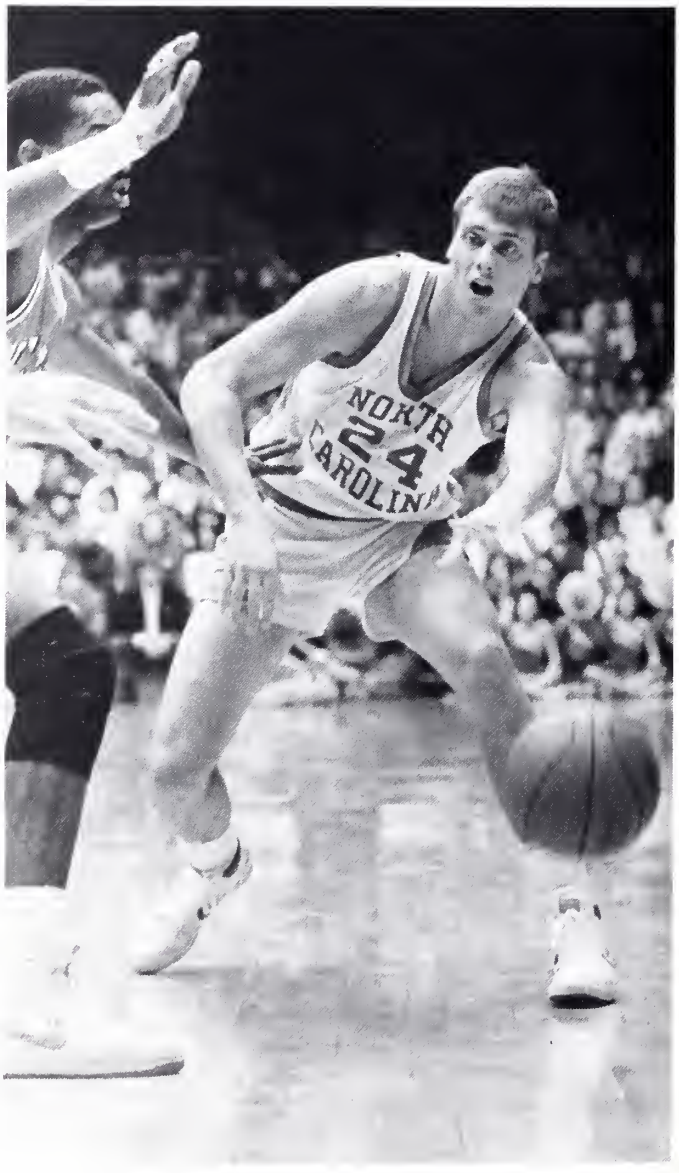
"We will be counting on him defensively to play our opponents' best scorers in the frontcourt. Offensively, he is capable of playing any of our three frontcourt positions and that versatility will be a big help to us."

The New Rules

"I have been pushing for a three-point play on an outside shot ever since we started talking about a shot clock. If you have one, I think you must have the other. For example, if you just had a time clock without the three-point play, teams would pack their defenses back in and poor rebounding teams would have no chance to win. Before the clock, you could hold the ball. Now, if you're really out-manned, you can work on shooting for three points and if you happen to be shooting well, you have a chance to win.

"Ideally, I think the game would be best with a 30-second clock and a three-point goal from the top of the key. It was at my suggestion that the ACC experimented with the 30-second clock and the three-point field goal in 1983 and I thought that was a great game. The big difference between 1983 and now is that no one really made the three-point play a key part of their offense. Everyone was playing outside games and hoping to get into the NCAA Tournament where the three-point goal wasn't being used. I think we probably made better use of those rules than anyone, except maybe Clemson. But, it was hard to quit taking those shots when we got into the NCAA's. And while it was a good shot for three points, it was a bad shot for two.

"We will again try to take advantage of the rules, but we're not going to make wholesale changes in the way we play."



Coach Smith says Wolf is "vastly under-rated."

Could be one of the better guards in the Atlantic Coast Conference... Started during the last half of his 1985–86 freshman season... Improved defensively as the year progressed... Will be counted on to team with Kenny Smith and form a strong defensive backcourt... Capable of playing either guard position... Good ballhandler and passer... A very smart player... Appeared in all 34 games last year, scoring 314 points for a 9.2 average... Shot 51.4 percent from the field and 74.0 percent at the foul line... Averaged 2.5 rebounds, handed out 137 assists and made 40 steals... 10th in the ACC in assists... Made the first start of his career in the last game played in Carmichael Auditorium—against N.C. State on Jan. 4... Scored in every game, reaching double figures 15 times... It was his long jumper with less than two minutes to play that put Carolina ahead to stay at Jacksonville... Chosen to the All-Tournament team in the Orange Bowl Classic, scoring 10 points in each game... Was five-of-five from the field in that tournament's opener against Manhattan and also dished off a season-high 13 assists... Hit nine of 10 field goal attempts and scored a season-high 18 points in a 71–67 victory at Maryland... Scored 12 first-half points in that game to keep the Tar Heels close... Helped spark a come-from-behind win at Marquette... With Carolina down by nine and less than four minutes to play, he had a steal and lay-in and then another layup off a Kenny Smith pass to get the Tar Heels back in the game... Scored 10 of his 12 points in the second half at Georgia Tech as Carolina rallied from a 13-point deficit to win, 78–77, in overtime... Hit both ends of a one-and-one free throw situation to bring Carolina to within one with just 1:19 left in regulation... The University

A magnificent campus has done much to earn the University of North Carolina the title "Southern Part of Heaven," but the University's renown for natural beauty has been more than equalled by its reputation as one of the world's foremost academic institutions.

In 1985, the University became even more prominently recognized for its quality education.

Part of that distinction came from Richard Moll, author of "The Public Ivys: A Guide to America's Best Colleges and Universities." He picked Carolina as one of eight public universities in the nation equivalent to a traditional Ivy League school at a fraction of the cost.

He also called Chapel Hill the perfect college town:

"No one seems to know how or why it happened, or what ingredients that a perfect college town must have, but it all somehow came together here."

Education writers at The New York Times also praised the University, including it on the list of 221 institutions they call "The Best Buys in College Education."

"Professors try hard to reduce the impersonality of large classes," The Times wrote. "Office hours are available, many courses enroll under 35 students, and honors seminars are limited to five to 10 people... The balmy Carolina weather and beautiful campus also contribute to the high quality of life."

It wasn't the first time The Times singled out the University. Carolina also made the newspaper's "1984-85 Guide to Selective Colleges" placing in the top 6 percent of the 275 colleges rated.

Similarly, a survey published by U.S. News and World Report ranked the University among the top 10 institutions in the nation for the high quality of its undergraduate program.

Those new honors give further credence to a comprehensive evaluation published recently by the National Academy Press. In it, Carolina was ranked as one of the nation's best graduate and research institutions. The faculty was rated as the most outstanding in the Southeast and one of the best in the country.

Other studies have rated various schools and departments as among the best, and the University Library was rated first in the Southeast and 17th in the nation.

Such lofty standing also is reflected in the honors received by faculty members and students. Members of the faculty have won major awards and held top positions in virtually every discipline in which Carolina has a program. Fifty-four Guggenheim fellowships have been awarded since 1951, and numerous Fulbrights and other awards are received each year.

Many UNC students have been named Rhodes Scholars since 1973. The Morehead Scholarship Program, patterned after the Rhodes and considered the best of its kind, brings about 60 outstanding and well-rounded freshmen to Chapel Hill each year.

The Pulitzer Prize has been awarded to University faculty members, alumni and to books published by the UNC Press, one of the best academic presses in the nation.

The faculty's research and scholarship capabilities attract large sums of money each year in research, training grants and contracts. In 1985, for example, the University received the biggest one-year increase in funding from the National Institutes of Health for any U.S. university. NIH receipts to the University rose 37 percent to $52.4 million from $38.3 million in 1984.

The University serves North Carolinians in many other ways. Through its many outreach programs, the University enrolls businessmen, government leaders and public school principals in management courses. Physicians, dentists, lawyers and other professionals participate in teaching and learning programs, and the Division of Extension and Continuing Education offers thousands of state residents a chance to study and learn at home with a wide range of credit and noncredit courses. The Area Health Education Centers program and the Institute of Government are considered models for outreach efforts. The University has received national attention for its role in creating the Research Triangle Park, one of the most promising research and education centers in the world.

The flagship institution of the 16-campus university system, the University at Chapel Hill is the only state-supported campus in North Carolina that is a member of the Association of American Universities, a 50-member organization of the leading universities in the United States and Canada. Carolina became a member in 1922.

Carolina continues to make improvements.

Early in 1985, the University completed a yearlong, self-study, concentrating on its role as a major research university. Strengths were highlighted, but so were areas where improvement was needed to further establish the University as one of the top 10 research institutions in the country.

"We see excellent prospects for developing new initiatives in higher education and for continuing and advancing a tradition of excellence in learning that has accrued over 200 years," said Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham III.

The need for the best facilities also has been recognized. In the last three years, the University has completed the Smith Center, the Walter Royal Davis Library, the Lineberger Cancer Research Center, the Hanes Art Center and the Morehead Chemistry Laboratories. Buildings expected to be occupied this year include the Kenan Center of North Carolina, which will house an institute for the study of private enterprise, and Carmichael Residence Hall. Construction also continues on Sitterson Hall, the new computer science building, and the Public Health and Environmental Sciences Center.

The motivation for Carolina's continuing thrust forward is simple. In 1795 it became the first state university to open its doors, and, as it approaches its bicentennial year, it is striving to continue to advance its tradition of excellence in service to North Carolina and the nation.

"In very few states can the most promising students truly reach for the stars at their own state-owned university," Fordham said.

"That the people have made these outstanding academic resources available—at such a modest cost to the student—is part of the genius of the University of North Carolina."

South Building

Chancellor Christopher Fordham

As its chancellor since 1980, Dr. Christopher C. Fordham III has led the University of North Carolina to ever stronger standing as one of the nation's great academic, research and service institutions.

In report after report, the University has placed among the top 20 colleges and universities in the nation and at the top among those in the South or Southeast. The University has been measured by its reputation among peers, the productivity of its faculty and graduates and its success in attracting federal and other outside funds for research and programs, and by each criterion, it has been found excellent.

Building upon those honors, Fordham has directed the University into new areas critical to the nation's future.

Particularly visible among these initiatives have been efforts to extend the University's cooperative efforts with North Carolina's public schools and steps to incorporate technology into all appropriate aspects of the educational process.

The school-related programs have reflected Fordham's philosophy that education is a continuum, with stronger public schools providing greater human resources for the University, which in turn produces the leaders of the future.

Significant efforts have included the Lyndhurst Fellowship Program, which supports bright students who will become the best teachers; the Center for Mathematics and Science Education, which works to increase and improve the supply of qualified secondary school mathemetics and science teachers; a College of Arts and Sciences program of workshops and internships for writing and foreign language teachers; and other innovative activities.

The emphasis on educational quality overlaps considerably with the efforts Fordham has directed to gain acceptance for technology in all areas of academia.

The College of Arts and Sciences is conducting a computer-aided curriculum development program with support from IBM Corp., in which computers are being used in language tutorials, English composition and other areas.

The University also is constructing a new computer science building, which will assist faculty members in that area of pursuing the most advanced research. Teaching in computer science has been enhanced by a teleclassroom facility, designed and operated by the Media and Instructional Support Center, which enables classes to be taught concurrently at Carolina and Duke University with full two-way communication.

Fordham's leadership role extends beyond the bounds of the University. He was a founding member of the board of directors of the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, and he hold other memberships and committee appointments in professional organizations including the Governing Council of the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences.

Great strides in the health professions were made while Fordham was dean of the School of Medicine (1971–79) and vice chancellor for health affairs (1977–80). Medical school programs were expanded, faculty strengthened and minority enrollment increased and the school gained national prominence for its excellence and creativity. The Area Health Education Centers program was begun as a way to bring physicians closer to the population in this relatively rural state. A partnership among the state's four academic medical centers, community hospitals and health professionals throughout the state, AHEC has succeeded in achieving a more balanced distribution of doctors and other health professionals and is considered a model for decentralized health education.

New programs also have been undertaken in the other health affairs schools—dentistry, nursing, pharmacy and public health—and a cooperative effort has led to the creation of a Center for Health Promotion and Disease Prevention.

An impressive list of achievements has been recorded in the Division of Academic Affairs. The implementation of a new curriculum has incorporated basic skills in English, mathematics and foreign languages, as well as broad perspectives in science, in Western and non-Western culture, in aesthetics and in the humanities.

The School of Business Administration has undertaken numerous service programs and, in concert with the William R. Kenan Jr. Charitable Trust, has begun a center for the study of private enterprise, which will be housed in the new Kenan Center of North Carolina.

Many of the accomplishments of Fordham's tenure as chancellor were mentioned prominently in the report of the University's year-long self-study, which concluded in 1985. The study found the University to be particularly effective in its undergraduate teaching, in scholarship among the faculty, in research achievement and in public service programs.

"This study will help guide the University and the state into reinforced and advanced excellence," Fordham said, "as we approach the 21st century."

A Greensboro native, Fordham is the son of an alumnus and married to an alumna, Barbara. Barbara Fordham is known as one who unstintingly supports and represents the University with her chancellor husband. Their children also have attended the University.

Fordham earned his certificate in medicine from the then two-year medical school at UNC in 1949 and his M.D. from Harvard University. Except for a few short periods away—for military service, dean of medicine at the Medical College of Georgia and a stint as the surgeon general of the United States—he has been in Chapel Hill.

"When one's University calls, it's a very magnetic pull," he said.

While under the influence of that magnetism, he has repaid the University with work that has brought personal distinction as well. Fordham is a former member of the Association of American Medical Colleges' executive council and past chairman of the AAMC and the National Council of Deans and Southern Regional Deans.

He is a diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine, a distinguished service member of the AAMC, a fellow of the American College of Physicians, a member of the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences and a member of several other honorary societies.

He is an accomplished researcher and has written widely on health policy.

But above all, Fordham is the leader of the University at Chapel Hill, a job he continues to approach with missionary zeal.

"The University, I think, has a very special role," he has said, "because it's where youngsters can reach for the stars. There are 13-year olds all over the state of North Carolina who are striving to make better grades for one reason right now at this stage in their lives—so they can go to Carolina. And that's a wonderful aspiration for them to have."

Athletic Director John Swofford

The director of athletics at the University of North Carolina is John Swofford, nationally recognized as one of the best administrators in intercollegiate sports.

Swofford, a 1972 Carolina graduate, is in his seventh year as head of his alma mater's Athletic Department. The Tar Heel program is one of the biggest in the South, fielding 26 varsity teams, and one of the finest in the nation in terms of success both on and off the playing field.

In his short time as athletic director, Swofford has already seen Carolina teams win 36 Atlantic Coast Conference championships and eight national collegiate titles. The Tar Heels have won or tied for first place in the race for the Carmichael Cup, symbolic of overall athletic excellence in the ACC, each of his six years on the job.

Certainly, credit for Carolina's on-the-field success must go to Swofford for his behind-the-scenes work. While the day-to-day running of the Athletic Department is a time-consuming task alone, Swofford has also undertaken several special projects on campus and has served on some of the most important national committees in college sports.

With Swofford in the lead, Carolina successfully completed a $34,000,000 fund-raising drive to construct the new Smith Center, a complex which includes a 21,500-seat basketball arena and an Olympic-size swimming pool. Swofford planned the construction of the Student-Athlete Development Center as an addition to Kenan Fieldhouse. That building, a one-of-a-kind facility, includes the most modern equipment to aid student-athletes in their studies and physical development.

Since Swofford became athletic director, a new tennis stadium and clubhouse have been built; Boshamer Stadium has been expanded and dressing rooms renovated for the Tar Heel baseball team; three new holes have been completed at Finley Golf Course; the football practice fields have been rebuilt and lighted; a new Astroturf playing field installed; and the Fetzer Field track has been resurfaced.

In addition, the automation of the Athletic Department has been completed; Carolina has hosted four national championship tournaments; the academic support staff has been expanded; and major changes have been made in the school's football schedules.

Nationally, Swofford was appointed to the NCAA Football Television Committee in 1982 and was named its chairman in 1984. He handled the committee during the stormy dispute over football television rights. He is a member of the NCAA Football Post-Season Bowl Committee and is a past chairman of the ACC Television Committee.

The Swoffords: Chad, John, Becky, Autumn and Bogie

In June, he was elected to the 50-member executive committee of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

These accomplishments are a good indication Swofford is well aware of the problems facing intercollegiate athletics and how to cope with them. But, Chancellor Christopher Fordham knew that when he named him to replace Bill Cobey as athletic director on May 1, 1980. Cobey had resigned to pursue public office.

"My single greatest desire is for our program to be a shining example that you can be nationally competitive at the major-college level without breaking the rules or prostituting academic integrity," says Swofford.

"Our approach is not complicated. I tell our coaches three things: we want to be competitive for ACC championships, we expect our student-athletes to graduate and cheating will not be tolerated. If we accomplish those things, we can be termed successful.

"Our basic philosophy is not complex. It is a commitment to excellence and integrity; to represent our University in a positive way and reflect her character and values; and to care about our athletes as people, constantly keeping in mind that their positive development as human beings is paramount."

A native of North Wilkesboro, N.C., Swofford first came to Carolina as a Morehead Scholar in 1967. He graduated in 1971 with an A.B. in psychology and industrial relations.

He played quarterback and defensive back on Tar Heel football teams in 1969, 1970 and 1971. Those last two teams went to the Peach Bowl and Gator Bowl. He tied a then-school record against Vanderbilt in 1969 by throwing three touchdown passes in one game.

In 1973 he earned a masters in athletic administration at Ohio University. In his time there Swofford served as a graduate assistant to the assistant business manager of athletics.

From 1973 to 1976 he was athletic ticket manager and assistant to the director of athletic facilities and finance at the University of Virginia. His duties in that job included directing all ticket sales, advertising and promotions. He also handled game contract settlements, stadium and coliseum operations and team travel arrangements.

He returned to Carolina in May, 1976 as assistant athletic director and business manager, handling all the athletic department's business affairs. Among his many other responsibilities were handling fund-raising affairs, team travel and the athletic dining hall. He also coordinated sports camps.

Although he remained assistant athletic director, Swofford dropped the business manager title and was named assistant executive vice-president of the Educational Foundation in January, 1979. In that job he was in charge of the overall financial structure of the Athletic Department. His position with the Educational Foundation involved general office procedures, membership services and fund-raising.

Swofford is a member of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics and is on the alumni advisory board for the Ohio University Sports Administration program. He received the Distinguished Alumni Award from Ohio University in 1984.

Swofford serves on the board of directors of the Chapel Hill Ronald McDonald House and North Carolina National Bank in Chapel Hill. He is also on the board of directors of North Carolina Amateur Sports which is handling the 1987 National Olympic Festival.

A regular jogger, Swofford enjoys reading and tennis. He is married to the former Becky Owens of North Wilkesboro. They have two children, Autumn and Chad.

Dean Smith

In a quarter of a century of coaching basketball at the University of North Carolina, Dean Smith has established a record unmatched in the game.

Smith has won 579 games and lost just 171 in 25 years at Carolina, a winning percentage of .772.

No one in college basketball today can come close to matching those figures.

Thus, it's no surprise that in a DALLAS MORNING NEWS poll of head coaches at the Final Four last spring, Smith was named the best in his profession by his peers. The Tar Heel coach received 49 votes to 33 for Bobby Knight. No one else had more than 20 votes.

"He is the most innovative, creative coach in college basketball," Lee Rose once said of Smith. "Nobody is better. I've been coaching 20 years and I don't say that flippantly."

The records indicate Rose is right.

Teams coached by Smith have won an NCAA championship, a National Invitation Tournament title and an Olympic Gold Medal. The only other coaches in history to accomplish that feat have been Pete Newell and Knight.

Smith's NCAA crown came in 1982 and his 1971 team swept the NIT. He guided the United States to a sweep of the 1976 Summer Olympic Games in Montreal.

Smith, who played for the legendary Phog Allen at Kansas, is also one of only two men to play on an NCAA championship team and then coach one. Knight is the other.

His winning percentage of .772 makes Smith the fourth-winningest coach in history of anyone who has worked at least 20 seasons on the major college level.

The men ahead of him?

Just three guys named Clair Bee, Adolph Rupp and John Wooden.

During the past 20 seasons Smith's Tar Heels have been among the most dominant in the game. Carolina has a record of 513–124 in that stretch, a winning percentage of .805. That's an average record of 25–6 each season and has been compiled against an always difficult schedule. No one has won more games than the Tar Heels in those two decades.

Under Smith, Carolina has made seven trips to the NCAA's Final Four. The only coach who has made more Final Four appearances than Smith is Wooden. In NCAA regional championships, Wooden is the leader with 12, followed by Smith with seven.

Wooden and Smith are also the winningest coaches in NCAA Tournament history. Wooden has 47 Tournament victories and Smith ranks second with 33. Rupp is third with 30.

Carolina has been in the NCAA Tournament field each of the past 12 seasons. That is the longest current streak in the nation. In fact, only UCLA has ever had a longer streak with 13.

Smith's teams are the only ones in the country to have finished each of the past three seasons in the top 10 of the final wire service polls. Carolina has a streak of six straight top 10 finishes and has ended the year there 10 times in the past 11 seasons.

The Tar Heels have now won at least 20 games for 16 consecutive years. That gives Smith the longest streak of consecutive 20-win seasons in history. He also has had 14 seasons in which his teams have won at least 25 games, more than any other major college coach ever. Wooden had 11 seasons of at least 25 victories.

The highlight of this era came in 1982 when the Tar Heels defeated Georgetown, 63–62, in one of the most exciting and best played NCAA championship games of all time.

But, perhaps the most amazing accomplishment of all has been the way Smith's teams have dominated Atlantic Coast Conference play in recent years. The Tar Heels have now finished at least third in the ACC for 22 straight seasons. That includes a 19-year stretch in which Carolina was either first or second in the league standings each season. No other school in any other league has ever finished first or second in its conference standings for such a long period.

Carolina has won nine ACC Tournament titles in the last 20 years. The Tar Heels have won either the league's regular-season race or Tournament championship 15 times in that same 20-year period and has been to a national post-season tournament each of those 20 seasons.

Sueeess like that was one of the reasons Smith was indueted into the Naismith Basketball Hall of fame in 1983. He had been taken into the state of North Carolina's Sports Hall of fame two years prior to that.

Aetually, Smith's plaee among the great men of the game has been obvious for some time. Former Marquette Coach Rick Majerus touehed on that four years ago when he heard Joe Wolf, whom he had been recruiting, was going to attend Carolina.

"Joe made a good ehoiee," said Majerus. "North Carolina may very well be the best program in the eountry and Dean Smith may very well be the best eoaeh of all time."

Sueh tributes from his peers are nothing new for Smith. For years rival eoaehes have talked about the consistency of his teams, the integrity of his program and the fact his players are also students.

"When you play against North Carolina and Dean Smith, that's the best," said California Coach Lou Campanelli after his James Madison team faeed the Tar Heels in the 1983 NCAA Tournament. "That's the epitome of college basketball.

"They represent everything you want—dedieation, elass, attitude. As we built our program at James Madison, we've paid a lot of attention to that. If that refleets in our style of play, that we resemble North Carolina, then I consider that a compliment."

Virginia Coaeh Terry Holland touehed more speeifically on the consistency of Smith's teams a few years ago in talking about the ACC.

"Beeause of the league we're in, it's diffieult to stay at the top every year," he said. "Only one team, North Carolina, has been able to do that. The rest of us have a eouple of good years, then we have to fight for a eouple of years and put it back together."

Despite all his sueeesses at Carolina, one of Smith's best-known aeeomplishments aetually eame elsewhere. In 1976 he guided the United States basketball team to a sweep of the Summer Olympie Games in Montreal. In only a few weeks he molded a college allstar team into a closely-knit unit. Still, the Americans faeed the tremendous ehallenge of competing against international teams which had been playing together for years.

That team also faeed the pressure of trying to regain the Gold Medal which had been lost in the controversial 1972 Games and putting the United States back at the top of international eompetition. With Smith emphasizing a tough pressure defense and fastbreaking team play on offense, the Americans did just that.

Smith aeeomplished this feat even though he did not have all of the best amateur players in the United States at his disposal. At that time, many of the top college players were turning down Olympic opportunities, preferring to prepare for professional eareers. Players like Robert Parrish, Leon Douglas and John Lueas, for example, spurned Olympie tryouts.

However, the Americans still won the Montreal ehampionship. In fact, four of Smith's Tar Heels played key roles in that Olympie triumph—Mitch Kupchak, Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and Phil Ford. Smith has now had players on the last six Olympie teams. In addition to the 1976 players, there were Larry Brown in 1964, Charlie Scott in 1968, Bobby Jones in 1972, Al Wood in 1980 and Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan in 1984.

How has Smith aeeomplished all this?

It's a combination of things. He has tremendous rapport with his players, he is a master teaeher and his style of play gets amazing results.

Former Marquette Coach Al MeGuire may have put it best when he said, "If anyone was ever born to be a coaeh, it's Dean Smith. He's the Jaek Armstrong type person."

Carolina teams under Smith are known for unselfish play, great teamwork and a tenaeious man-to-man defense. Although the Tar Heels speeialize in a whirlwind, fast-breaking offense, they also have a diseiplined attaek and always rank among the national leaders in field goal pereentage.

A recent NCAA study of the past 20 years showed that Carolina ranked first nationally in that period in field goal percentage, third in average vietory margin and seventh in scoring.

That high ranking in seoring is no surprise. Although Smith is sometimes kidded about eoaching "slowdowns" beeause of the four eorners offense he uses late in some games, his teams usually rank among the scoring leaders.

Among Smith's many innovations are his run-and-jump defense, the mixing of pressure defenses, the point zone, team huddles at the foul line, the free-lanee passing game, the four eorners offense and the seramble defense.

"Dean is one of the most organized and brilliant minds that I've ever met in basketball," says Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "He has had a great effect on my thinking. He shared ideas and thoughts and philosophies with me that people just don't share with people, and I will always be grateful and respect him for that. He did me a tremendous favor. One of the greatest gifts you can share with somebody is the knowledge that you have."

Smith has also shared his success at Carolina with those around him. Two of his former assistants, John Lotz and Kenny Rosemond, left Carolina to take head coaching jobs in the Southeastern Conference. Larry Brown, a former player and coach under Smith, is now the head coach at Smith's alma mater, Kansas. Eddie Fogler, another former Tar Heel player who had worked on Smith's staff for 13 years, took the head coaching job at Wichita State last spring.

Smith's current assistants, Bill Guthridge and Roy Williams, have turned down head coaching jobs at major universities to remain in Chapel Hill. Smith, himself, has been offered numerous other coaching jobs, both on the college and professional level.

Interest of professional teams in Smith is no surprise. In the last 20 years alone, 29 of Smith's players have gone on to play pro basketball in this country and many others have played professionally in Europe.

Seven of Smith's players have won pro rookie-or-the-year honors—Billy Cunningham, Charlie Scott, Robert McAdoo, Bobby Jones, Walter Davis, Phil Ford and Michael Jordan. It is no coincidence that so many Tar Heel players have been successful in the NBA. Carolina players seem to make the adjustment from college to the pros quite easily. Jordan, in fact, won some NBA Player-of-the-Year honors as a rookie.

Kevin Loughery, who coached Jordan in Chicago, gave Smith a lot of credit for Michael's quick success.

"Michael has had the most media hype I've ever seen in professional basketball and I was around Dr. J. for three years," said Loughery. "He has handled it all extremely well.

"It's a tremendous tribute to the way Dean Smith, who is one of the greatest coaches of all time, handled this guy. You can see his training. We are very fortunate that he has had that coaching background."

Pat Riley of the Los Angeles Lakers recently paid Smith a similar compliment in talking about James Worthy.

"I think James' success is based directly on how he was coached in college," said Riley. "We always look for players from North Carolina. If we could draft players from North Carolina every year, we'd do it. You know they know how to play. The players are so full of character like James and Michael Jordan. I have a lot of respect for Coach Smith. I'm the beneficiary of a man who has taught all these guys how to play the game. When they come to the pros, they're refined. They're ready to step right in."

Bobby Jones once gave Smith credit for his professional career in an interview with the NEW YORK TIMES.

"If I had gone to any other school, I probably would not have been in pro basketball," said Jones. "I was a shy and gangly kid, not very well coordinated when I began playing basketball in junior high school. At North Carolina they gave me the tools to play in the pros and I don't want to forget it."

Of course, Smith's players have performed pretty well in college as well as on the professional level. He has had more All-Americas than any active coach. On four occasions Smith's players have been named National Player of the Year—Ford in 1978, James Worthy in 1982 and Jordan in both 1983 and 1984. Jordan was a unanimous selection in the latter season.

A native of Emporia, Kansas and a graduate of Topeka High School, Smith attended the University of Kansas on an academic scholarship. He played freshman football and varsity basketball and baseball there. He was a member of Jayhawk basketball teams which won the national championship in 1952 and finished second in 1953.

Smith was assistant basketball coach and golf coach at the Air Force Academy in 1958 when he was brought to Carolina by Frank McGuire. He served as one of McGuire's assistants until being named head coach in 1961. That followed McGuire's departure to the NBA.

After taking Carolina to the NCAA title game in 1977, Smith was named National Coach of the Year by the National Association of Basketball Coaches. He received that same honor from the U.S. Basketball Writers Association in 1979 and from Medalist in 1982.

Smith is a great goodwill ambassador for the University. He is called upon to lecture at basketball clinics all over the world. He is a past president of the NABC. He was the only basketball coach among a group of college presidents who served on the NCAA Select Committee, which was appointed to study many of the problems facing intercollegiate athletics today.

Smith has won the prestigious Golden Plate Award from the American Academy of Achievement which honors people from all fields. The only other coaches ever to receive that award have been Wooden, Bud Wilkinson, Bear Bryant, Joe Paterno and Tom Landry.

In his spare time Smith enjoys golf, tennis, music and reading. He has a special interest in theology.

Smith has five children. Daughters Sandy and Mrs. Sharon Kepley are Carolina graduates as is son Scott. Smith also has two younger daughters, Kristen Caroline and Kelly Marie. In addition, he has two grandchildren, Drew and Megan Kepley. Smith's wife, Linnea, is a physician.

Bill Guthridge

One of the premier coaches in college basketball is Bill Guthridge, chief assistant on Dean Smith's staff at the University of North Carolina.

He has been called by some, including Smith and former Marquette Coach Al McGuire, "the best assistant coach in the country."

Now in his 20th season in Chapel Hill, Guthridge has a thorough knowledge of all aspects of his profession—teaching, organizing, motivating and recruiting.

His reputation is such that Guthridge's name is usually mentioned when there is a major college vacancy even though he has indicated he is not interested in leaving Carolina. He has turned down several head coaching jobs and has had his name withdraw from consideration for others.

"Bill has made a decision to stay in Chapel Hill and not seek other head coaching positions," says Smith. "I personally feel he should have taken several of the excellent opportunities he has had. But, he's decided that's not what he wants.

"By staying here, he has certainly given great stability to our program. He's one of the top coaches in America and I'm including head coaches as well as assistants. His record as an assistant, first at Kansas State and then here, has been tremendous. He has made great contributions to both programs."

A 1960 Kansas State graduate, Guthridge has been connected with great teams throughout his basketball career. He played on three Wildcat teams which won Big Eight championships and has been a part of some of the greatest seasons in Tar Heel history.

In fact, Guthridge has been to the NCAA's Final Four a total of eight times—six as an assistant at Carolina, once as an assistant at Kansas State and once as a player.

Guthridge first came to Chapel Hill for the 1967-68 season. The Tar Heels have been in a national post-season tournament in all of his 19 years here. In that 19-year period, Carolina has finished as low as third in the Atlantic Coast Conference standings only once, has won either the ACC regular-season or tournament title 14 times, won the 1971 NIT and captured the NCAA championship in 1982.

Bill was also a key factor in the United States' basketball triumph in the 1976

Summer Olympic Games. He and Georgetown's John Thompson served as assistant coaches to Smith and also scouted the Americans' opponents.

In his time at Carolina, Guthridge has worked with both the team's offensive and defensive schemes. He is currently the Tar Heel shooting instructor. It is no coincidence that Carolina annually shoots better than 50 percent from the field. In fact, the Tar Heels have the best field goal percentage of any team in the country over the last decade. Carolina was second nationally in field goal percentage last year with a school-record mark of 55.9. The Tar Heels had been third in the country two seasons ago and second in 1984.

A native of Parsons, Kans., Guthridge played his high school basketball for Harold Johnson, one of two brothers who were innovators of the zone press in the 1930's.

At Kansas State he helped the Wildcats win the Big Eight championship in 1958, 1959 and 1960. Based on his leadership, academic record and athletic accomplishments, he was chosen one of the University's 13 most outstanding all-around seniors.

Following graduation, Guthridge coached at Scott City High in Kansas for two years before returning to his alma mater as an assistant to Tex Winter. During his time on the KSU staff, the Wildcats posted a 93-43 record, swept two Big Eight titles and once advanced to the Final Four.

In his first six years at Carolina, Guthridge coached Tar Heel freshman and junior varsity teams. He had a 72-25 record and won the Big Four championship four times, an outstanding feat in those days.

Smith gives him much credit for helping develop the players who have kept Carolina among the top basketball powers in the nation.

Besides working with Smith and Winter, two of the great names in coaching, Guthridge has also coached in Puerto Rico summer leagues twice. He was once named coach of the year and was invited to coach the 1968 Puerto Rican Olympic team.

Of course, Guthridge's greatest notoriety has come for his work at Carolina.

"Bill is highly respected by the players who have been through our program," says Smith. "He is sincere in his recruiting and I think that has made him a favorite of prospective student-athletes and their families. He is a man of great integrity."

Unlike many coaches, Guthridge says he actually enjoys recruiting.

"Some people say recruiting is undesirable, that it's the worst part of being a college coach," he says. "But my experiences have been very enjoyable. I think that has a lot to do with the type of young man which our university attracts."

Bill is considered an excellent judge of talent at the high school level. When he believes a high school player can develop into an excellent college player, his past record indicates he's right. Former Tar Heel star Bobby Jones is a prime example.

Guthridge, who got his B.S. in mathematics, has a master's degree in education and has taken courses at Carolina toward his Ph.D.

Guthridge has an excellent sense of humor and is one of the most popular after-dinner speakers in the Carolina athletic department.

Bill and his wife, Leesie, have two sons, Jamie and Stuart, and a daughter, Megan.

Roy Williams

One of the best young coaches in college basketball is Roy Williams, who is heading into his ninth season on the North Carolina staff.

In his eight years in Chapel Hill, Wiliams has gained a wealth of experience in all phases of what many consider the top college basketball program in the nation. He has coached the Tar Heel junior varsity, assisted with the varsity and assisted in recruiting and scouting.

Last spring Williams took on Eddie Fogler's recruiting duties when Fogler resigned to become the head coach at Wichita State. Williams had spent the previous three seasons in Chapel Hill with the varsity players, working on a conditioning program.

"Roy had not been out on the road recruiting for a couple of years," says Carolina Coach Dean Smith "and I think that's one of the reasons he turned down a major college head coaching job here in the South last spring. He wanted at least one more year of experience as a recruiter before taking a head job.

"In the past, he has done a great job in recruiting. The last time he was heavily involved in that aspect of our program, he was instrumental in recruiting the class of 1984, which included Sam Perkins and Matt Doherty."

On the court itself, Williams works closely with Carolina's big men, helping them with their rebounding and positioning. He also works with Bill Guthridge on the Tar Heels' shooting techniques.

Although Williams has already turned down a couple of Division I head coaching jobs, he does want to be a head coach at some point in the future. Smith says he will be an exceptional one.

"Roy is a highly-organized person who has all the characteristics of a great coach," says Smith. "He genuinely cares a great deal about his players. He's played a key role in the success we've had here in recent years.

"His goal is to be a head coach and he will be an outstanding one. He has a good rapport with the student-athlete, as well as all kinds of people. He is well respected in our profession. In fact, several college head coaches have come to Chapel Hill for advice and ideas from Roy.

"He has certianly proven himself as a college coach with the job his junior varsity teams have done against junior college and prep teams. For instance, with his tallest player at 6-4, his teams played very well against Fork Union when that school had first Melvin Turpin and then Chris Washburn."

A native of Asheville, N.C., Williams played basketball and baseball at T.C. Roberson High School. He was a member of the freshman basketball team at Carolina during the 1968–69 season. He is a 1972 Tar Heel graduate and also got his master's degree here.

Prior to returning to Chapel Hill in 1978 as a member of Smith's staff, Williams had spent five seasons as athletic director and head basketball coach at Owen High School in Swannanoa, N.C.

Williams is an avid golfer and shoots in the low 70's. Roy and his wife, Wanda, have a son, Scott, and a daughter, Kimberly.

Dick Harp

The newest member of North Carolina's basketball staff is Dick Harp, former head coach at the University of Kansas, who will serve as an administrative assistant to Dean Smith.

Harp came to Chapel Hill last summer, giving Smith a five-man staff for the first time in his 26 years at Carolina.

A Kansas graduate, Harp was captain of the 1940 Jayhawk team which lost to Indiana in the NCAA Finals. He joined Phog Allen's coaching staff there in 1948 and was an assistant in 1952 when Kansas won the national championship and in 1953 when the Jayhawks were the NCAA runners-up. Smith played on both of those teams.

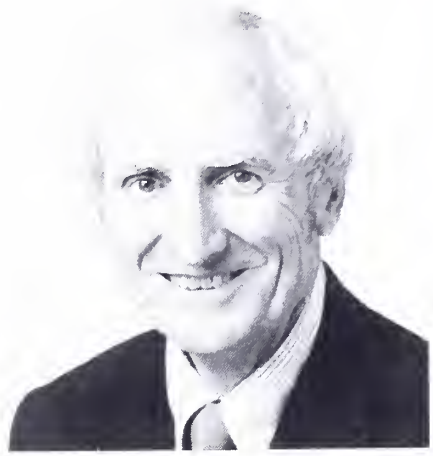
When Allen retired following the 1956 season, Harp took over the head job. His first team was 24-3, losing the NCAA championship game to Carolina in triple overtime.

Harp coached until 1964, resigning to become managing director of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. He had an eight-year coaching record of 121-82. He retired from the FCA as senior vice-president in 1983 and had been living in Kansas City.

"I'm delighted we've been able to attract Dick back to college basketball," says Smith. "He has one of the best basketball minds of anyone I know. He will certainly mean a lot to our program as a teacher on the playing floor and as an administrator because of his experience running the FCA offices.

"When I played at Kansas, I know our entire squad held him in the highest regard. I'm sure the players on our teams here will gain a great deal from their relationship with him."

Harp and his wife, Martha Sue, have a son and three grandchildren.



Randy Wiel

The youngest member of the Carolina basketball staff is Randy Wiel, a former Tar Heel player.

A graduate assistant last year, Wiel will be the head junior varsity coach this season. He was given this new position last spring after Eddie Fogler resigned to become head coach at Wichita State University. Wiel is now handling many of Roy Williams' old duties with Williams taking over Fogler's responsibilities.

A native of Curacao in the Netherlands Antilles, Wiel played on Carolina teams from 1975 to 1979, earning four letters.

Wiel spent six seasons in Europe playing professional basketball after leaving Chapel Hill. He was his league's rookie of the year in 1980 and MVP in both 1981 and 1984. He twice led his league in scoring.

Randy was a member of the Holland National Team for six years.

"As a player at Carolina, Randy always represented the University well," says Coach Dean Smith. "He's respected by everyone in our program and will do a fine job with his new duties."

Wiel was married to the former Connie Hicks last summer.

The Facts and Figures of Carolina Basketball

"Carolina is always there. State had its run, but Carolina was right there. Maryland did the same thing. Duke, Virginia, Tech—they all had their moments, but Carolina was always there. They've been great every year. They cast a shadow over the league."
—Duke All-America Guard Johnny Dawkins in THE ROANOKE TIMES (2-22-86)

Consistency.

It's the mark of true greatness in college basketball.

With the balance in the game today, it's possible for anyone to get into the NCAA Tournament in a given year, maybe even reaching the Final Four, perhaps even winning a national championship.

But, the stamp of greatness only goes to those who can have seasons like that over and over and over again.

That's what the University of North Carolina has done.

And, not only has Carolina been successful on the playing floor, but in the classroom, too. In fact, when it comes to both winning basketball games and graduating players, no one does it better than Carolina.

At a time when college athletics is facing numerous problems, the Tar Heel basketball program could well serve as a model for the way things should be done, for the way a major sport can be properly handled in an academic setting, for the way a program can be based on integrity and honesty and still be extremely successful.

And the Tar Heels have certainly been successful, from the day the first ball was tossed up back in 1911 all the way to the present. Carolina ranks second to Kentucky in all-time collegiate victories, but the record has been even more amazing since Dean Smith became head coach.

Among the accomplishments:

—Over the past 20 seasons Carolina has an incredible basketball record of 513-124. That's a winning percentage of .805. The Tar Heels have won more games than any other team in the past two decades.

—Carolina has the best winning percentage in the nation over the last 10 years (.809) and also over the last five seasons (.836).

—Carolina is the only school in the country which has finished in the top 10 of the wire service polls for each of the past three seasons. In fact, Carolina has ended the season in the top 10 for six straight years and 10 of the last 11.

—Carolina has been to 20 consecutive national post-season tournaments.

—The Tar Heels have made 12 straight trips to the NCAA Tournament. That's the longest current streak in the country. In fact, only UCLA (13) has ever had a longer streak in history.

—Carolina has reached the Final 16 of the NCAA Tournament 12 times in the last 20 years.

—Only Carolina has made the NCAA's Final 16 in each of the past six seasons.

—With nine appearances, Carolina ranks second to only UCLA (13) in trips to the Final Four.

—The balance in the Atlantic Coast Conference has been so great in the last four seasons that every team has had at least one losing record in league play. Everyone that is except Carolina. The Tar Heels' worst ACC record in this period was 9-5 in 1985.

—27 Carolina players have earned first-team All-America honors.

—On eight occasions the Tar Heels have produced college basketball's National Player of the Year.

—149 of Dean Smith's 156 lettermen have earned their college degrees.

Perhaps Carolina's most amazing feats have come in the ACC, the league generally regarded as the toughest and best-balanced in college basketball. As Johnny Dawkins pointed out last season, the Tar Heels have all but dominated the conference over the last 20 years.

In fact, Carolina has finished in the ACC's first division for 22 consecutive seasons. That includes an unprecedented streak of 19 straight first or second-place finishes. No other school in any other league has ever finished at the top of its conference standings 19 years in a row.

Over the last five years Carolina has a record of 56-14 in ACC play. That includes an incredible 14-0 mark in 1984. Second best mark in the league during that period is 40-30 by Virginia.

Carolina has finished first in the ACC race 18 times. That's 10 more times than any other school in the league. The Tar Heels have also won nine ACC Tournament championships, again the most in league history.

ACC teams have now made 18 trips to the Final Four. Carolina has accounted for eight of those.

These accomplishments have kept the Tar Heels in their customary role as everybody's biggest rival, which in turn makes what Carolina has done even more stunning.

"They say the mark of a champion is taking the other team's best shot and still winning," said Duke's Jay Bilas in THE WASHINGTON POST last March. "Carolina's been doing that year after year. They can be on a three-game losing streak, and everyone still wants to beat 'em, because they have 'North Carolina' on their chests."

That has been the case for years... Still, the Tar Heels have won.

And how they have won.

While Kentucky enters the 1986-87 season with 37 more victories than Carolina on the all-time winning list, the Wildcats have also played the game for seven more seasons. Kentucky and Carolina also have the best winning percentages in college history.

Carolina is one of only six schools to have won an NCAA championship and the National Invitational Tournament title. The Tar Heels won NCAA crowns in 1957 and 1982 and swept through the NIT in 1971. Carolina also was voted national champion in 1924 with a 26-0 record.

Since the NCAA Tournament was first played, Carolina has been one of its most dominating teams. It's nine trips to the Final Four is indication of that. So are 40 NCAA Tournament victories.

The Tar Heels have won eight NCAA regional titles, including seven eastern championships. No one else has won more than three eastern crowns. Carolina's regional titles came in 1957, 1967, 1968, 1969, 1972, 1977, 1981 and 1982.

The streak of 12 consecutive trips to the NCAA Tournament would be even longer except that for many years only one team from each conference was allowed to compete in the national field. It was during that time that the Tar Heels made NIT trips in 1970, 1971, 1973 and 1974.

The Carolina bench explodes as Charlie Scott's jumper at the buzzer beats Davidson in the 1969 East Regional finals, sending the Tar Heels to another Final Four.

No freshman class since 1963 has missed a post-season tournament at Carolina and only three have failed to go to the Final Four.

Carolina has finished in the top 10 of at least one wire service poll 16 times in the last 20 years. That's the most of any school in the country in that period. Eight times in that stretch the Tar Heels were ranked as one of the top four teams in the nation.

Although the Tar Heels have gained a lot of notoriety for the four-corners offense they have used late in some games, they actually rank as one of the nation's highest-scoring teams in recent years. Carolina runs one of the best fast breaks in college basketball and has averaged over 81 points a game since 1967.

However, the key to Carolina's success may be its changing man-to-man defenses. The Tar Heels mix their innovative and gambling scramble defense with more conservative pressure man-to-man. Well, that's conservative for the Tar Heels. Those who have played against it certainly would not call it that.

In fact, Carolina's defense is so effective it actually helps its offense. Steals and easy layups have accounted for many Tar Heel points over the years. That's one of the reasons Carolina has the best shooting percentage in the country over the last 20 seasons. Carolina has hit at least 51 percent of its shots from the floor for an incredible 16 consecutive years. That includes an ACC-record 55.9 last season.

The Tar Heel shooting percentage has also been helped over the years by the unselfishness of the Carolina players in selecting only the best shots to take.

Many people refer to basketball as "a tournament sport" and the Tar Heels have excelled in tournament play. Carolina, in fact, has now won 55 tournament championships. The Tar Heels have competed in such events as the Holiday Festival in New York City, the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu, the Sugar Bowl Classic in New Orleans, the Great Alaskan Shootout in Anchorage and the Far West Classic in Portland.

Carolina has had at least one player on each of the last six U.S. Olympic basketball teams—Larry Brown in 1964; Charlie Scott in 1968; Bobby Jones in 1972; Mitch Kupchak, Tommy LaGarde, Walter Davis and Phil Ford in 1976; Al Wood in 1980; and Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan in 1984.

There have been dozens of All-Americas at Carolina. Seventeen of them have played in the Dean Smith era alone—Billy Cunningham, Bob Lewis, Larry Miller, Charlie Scott, Dennis Wuycik, Bill Chamberlain, Robert McAdoo, Bobby Jones, Mitch Kupchak, Tommy LaGarde, Phil Ford, Mike O'Koren, Al Wood, James Worthy, Sam Perkins, Michael Jordan and Brad Daugherty.

In the last decade Carolina players have been named consensus first-team All-Americas seven times. No other school has had that many first-team selections in that 10-year period.

When Jordan was a unanimous choice as college basketball's National Player of the Year in 1984, it marked the eighth time a Tar Heel had been so honored. Jordan won that same award from The Sporting News in 1983 and Worthy had been named co-National Player of the Year by the Helms Foundation in 1982. Other Tar Heels who were chosen as the best player in America were Jack Cobb in 1926, George Glamack in 1940 and 1941, Lennie Rosenbluth in 1957 and Ford in 1978.

Last season Carolina moved into the new 21,444-seat Smith Center to play its games. The construction of that building was needed because it was just impossible to handle ticket demands in 10,000-seat Carmichael Auditorium. The new arena, already being called the best in college basketball, will allow over twice as many students to get into games. Members of the Educational Foundation, who have contributed large amounts of money to the University for several years but still could not get a seat in Carmichael, will now have an opportunity to watch the Tar Heels play. The new building cost $34 million and was constructed solely through private donations.

Most regular-season Tar Heel games are televised. Six Carolina games will be televised nationally this year by either CBS or NBC with many others being broadcast across the country by ESPN.

Carolina has produced numerous professional basketball players, including 31 since Smith became head coach. That group includes men who have been rookie of the year, player of the year and all-pro.

However, Smith's graduates also include 13 attorneys, 11 doctors, 22 coaches/teachers and numerous others who have become successes in the business world.

Perhaps Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino summed up the Carolina basketball program as succinctly as possible during the 1985 Southeast Regionals in Birmingham.

"North Carolina has a great team and a great tradition," he said. "North Carolina is what college basketball is all about, academically and athletically."

These facts and figures are an indication why.

Tar Heels celebrate the 1968 East Regional Championship.

Carolina and Its Players

National Players of the Year, conference MVPs, All-Americas and Olympians.

Scoring champions, defensive standouts, passing wizards and rugged rebounders.

The University of North Carolina has had them all in a basketball history that might just be the most glorious in the land.

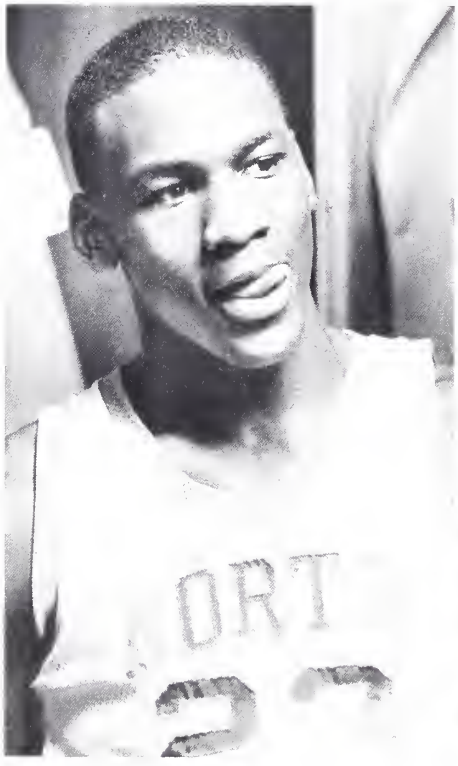
A complete list of Tar Heel heroes and their exploits would fill up books and, in fact, has done so. For the purpose of this guide, a shorter history is necessary.

Since 1911 when the sport was first played here, Carolina has won 1,371 basketball games. Only Kentucky, which has played for seven more seasons than the Tar Heels, has won more than that. The Wildcat total is 1,408 or just 37 more in seven extra seasons.

Carolina's first team, coached by Nat Carmell and captained by Marvin Ritch, posted a 7-4 record.

The Tar Heels' first great success in basketball then came in the Twenties. The 1922 team won the Southern Conference championship and the 1923 squad captured the South Atlantic title. Those teams had no regular coaches, but were simply taken to the games by Coaches Bob and Bill Fetzer, experts in almost every sport but basketball.

Norman Shepard was then hired to handle the basketball program in 1924 and promptly led the Tar Heels to a 26-0 record. Carolina won the Southern Conference championship and was declared national champion by the Helms Foundation.



Michael Jordan

That team featured three truly outstanding players—Cartwright Carmichael, Jack Cobb and Monk McDonald. While the style of play has changed drastically since then, these men are still recognized as three of Carolina's greatest stars.

Cobb is a member of the Helms Basketball Hall of Fame. He was a three-time All-America and the Helms National Player of the Year in 1926. At a time when most teams were barely scoring 30 points a game, he averaged 15 as a senior. Carmichael was twice named All-America and McDonald was an all-conference performer.

Although the Tar Heels did not have an All-America like Cobb or Carmichael in the 1930's, there were many outstanding players. Ivan (Jack) Glace, Earl Ruth, Virgil Weathers, Tom Alexander, Jim McCachren and Stewart (Snooks) Aitken made the All-Southern Conference team during that decade.

The big star of the early 1940's was George Glamack—"the Blind Bomber." Glamack had terrible eyesight and could barely see the basket while standing right under it. However, he developed the uncanny sense of knowing where the hoop was in relation to his position on the court. He perfected a hook shot which he shot with either hand and with great accuracy. He was a two-time All-America and Helms Player of the Year in 1940 and 1941. He's now in the Hall of Fame.

All-America John (Hook) Dillon was the key figure on the 1946 team which lost to Oklahoma A&M and big Bob Kurland in the NCAA Finals. Dillon, however, had an excellent supporting cast in Jim Jordan, Bones McKinney, Jim White and Bob Paxton. Jordan, in fact, had been an All-America in 1945 and the Most Valuable Player in the Southern Conference.

Eleven years later the Tar Heels again reached the national championship game. This time they won the NCAA title, defeating Wilt Chamberlain and Kansas, 54-53, in a triple-overtime thriller that rates among the greatest college games ever.

Lennie Rosenbluth was the star of that team. He averaged a school-record 28.0 points a game and was named National Player of the Year. Other starters on that unforgettable team were Pete Brennan (an All-America the following season), Tommy Kearns, Joe Quigg and Bob Cunningham. It was Quigg who hit two free throws with six seconds on the clock to win the final game in that 32-0 season.

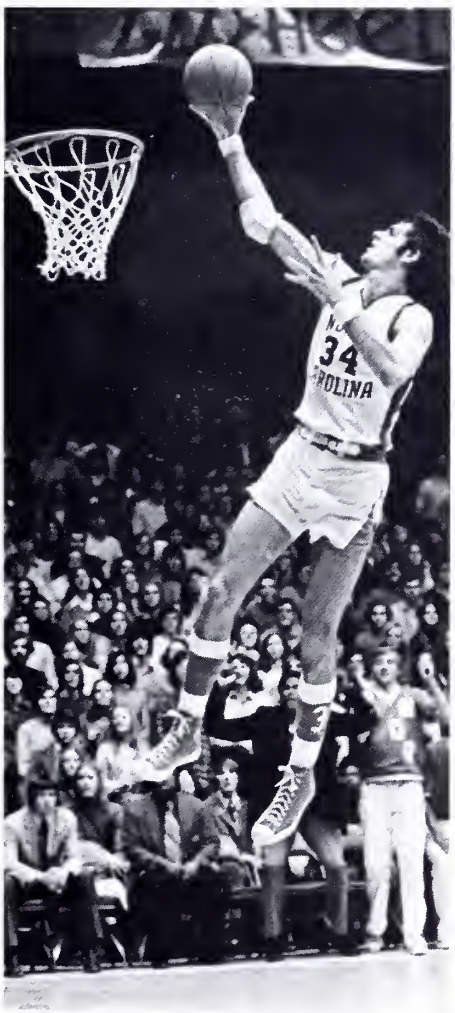
The stars were many during the 1960's. Big Lee Shaffer was the Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year in 1960. Shaffer was a great scorer and later was an all-star performer in the National Basketball Association with the Syracuse Nationals.

York Larese and Doug Moe also starred for the Tar Heels in the early part of the decade. Larese ranks as one of the greatest free throw shooters in Carolina history. Moe was a sensational all-around star and now coaches in the NBA.

A teammate of Moe's was Larry Brown, a diminutive guard who rates as one of Carolina's finest playmakers. Brown played on the 1964 U.S. Olympic Team which won the Gold Medal.

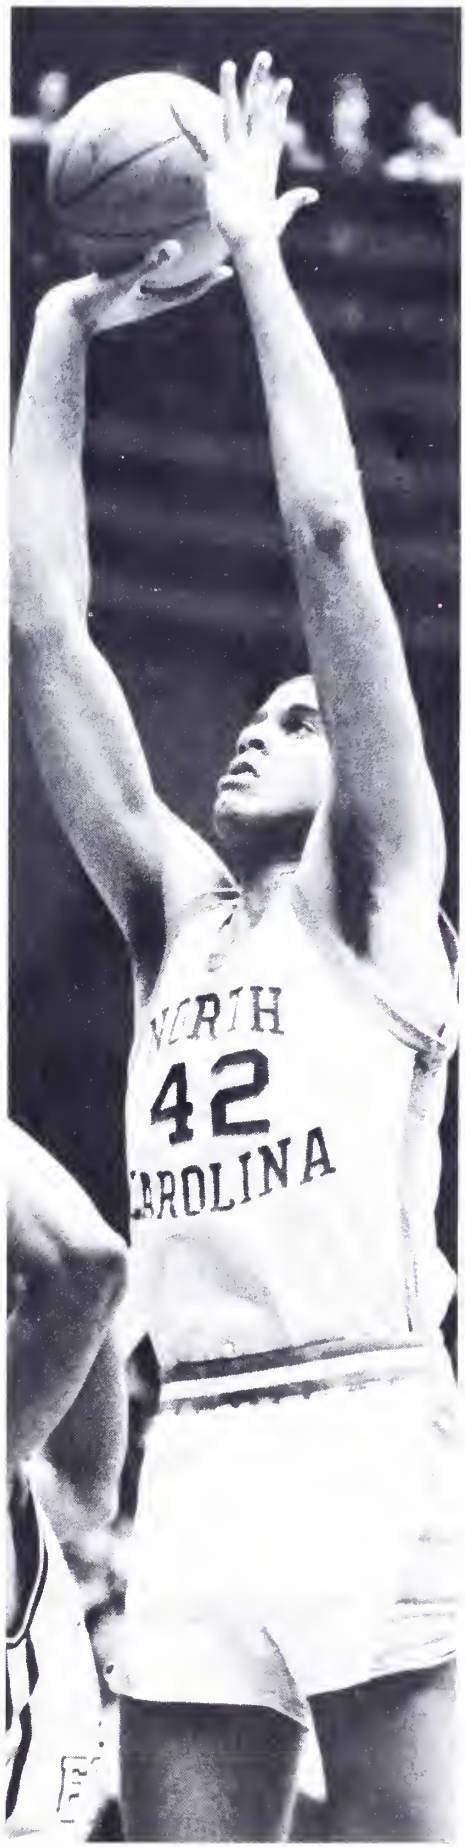
Billy Cunningham, a three-time All-ACC selection, was the next star on the Carolina scene. He made All-America in 1965. Only 6-5½, he led the conference in rebounding three times and in scoring twice. The "Kangaroo Kid" went on to have a great professional career with the Philadelphia 76ers and later coached that team.

Bob Lewis, a slender sharpshooter from Washington, D.C., followed Cunningham into the Tar Heel spotlight. He holds the Carolina single-game scoring record with 49 points against Florida State.



Bobby Jones

Dudley Bradley



Brad Daugherty

Next came Larry Miller, an All-America in 1968 when he led his team to the national finals where the Tar Heels lost to Lew Alcindor and UCLA. Miller was twice named the ACC Player of the Year. At 6-4 and 215 pounds, he was a rugged performer who dazzled crowds with driving layups and a great variety of shots.

Bill Bunting, Rusty Clark and Dick Grubar were starters on Carolina teams which won three straight ACC regular-season and tournament championships, swept three Eastern Regionals in a row and went to the Final Four in 1967, 1968 and 1969.

Bunting had a great senior season and made All-ACC. Grubar was one of the most popular athletes to wear Carolina Blue and was an outstanding playmaker and defender. Clark was a tough defensive player and a great rebounder.

Then there was Charlie Scott, who excelled in every phase of the game. He made All-America in his senior season and was voted ACC Athlete of the Year. In 1968 he starred for the United States in the Olympic Games.

Three fine frontcourt players—Bill Chamberlain, Dennis Wuycik and Robert McAdoo—sparked Carolina teams in the early 1970's. Chamberlain was the Most Valuable Player in the 1971 National Invitation Tournament as the Tar Heels swept that title. Wuycik was a fine shooter and an aggressive rebounder. McAdoo had a great shooting touch and was an excellent rebounder. They led the Tar Heels to the NCAA's Final Four in 1972.

Another All-ACC performer in that period was George Karl, a three-year starter and a highly popular player. He amazed fans with his daring and diving on the court.

One of the most complete players in the college game was Bobby Jones. Jones had great quickness and was a superb defender. He retired from the NBA last season after an outstanding career.

Another great all-around player was Mitch Kupchak, the 1976 ACC Player of the Year. Kupchak led the Tar Heels to a 25-4 record in his senior season and later played a key role in the Washington Bullets' 1978 NBA championship sweep and the Los Angeles Lakers' 1985 NBA title drive.

Then came Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and John Kuester. They played on Carolina teams which won 98 games and lost only 23. All three were excellent defensive players and good shooters.

Davis, in fact, is regarded as one of the greatest clutch players in Tar Heel history. He's a former NBA Rookie of the Year and an all-pro performer. Kuester was the Most Valuable Player in both the ACC Tournament and the Eastern Regionals as a senior. LaGarde was an All-America whose mid-season knee injury may have cost the Tar Heels the national championship in 1977.

And, of course, there was Phil Ford. He was National Player of the Year in 1978 and is the all-time Carolina leader in both points and assists. He has been called the greatest guard ever to play the college game. Phil also won NBA Rookie of the Year honors.

Mike O'Koren

One of the best defensive players at Carolina, or anywhere else for that matter, was Dudley Bradley. A first-round pro draft choice, Bradley was the MVP of the 1979 ACC Tournament.

The next big stars were a trio of dynamic forwards—Mike O'Koren, Al Wood and James Worthy. O'Koren was the sixth player chosen in the 1980 NBA draft after putting together a brilliant Carolina career. He ranks among the school's all-time leaders in scoring, rebounding and assists.

Wood capped a sensational four years by leading the Tar Heels to the 1981 NCAA championship game. He set an NCAA record with 39 points against Virginia in the national semi-finals. Always a great shooter, Wood developed into a complete player at Carolina. He was the first senior selected in the NBA draft following his final year.

Worthy was named Co-National Player of the Year with Ralph Sampson in 1982 after leading the Tar Heels to a 32-2 record and the NCAA championship. Worthy saved perhaps the greatest performance of his career for the stretch drive that year, being named MVP in the ACC Tournament, the Eastern Regionals and the Final Four. He had a career-high 28 points against Georgetown in the NCAA Finals and was the first player selected in the 1982 NBA draft.

Another key player on that 1982 team was Jimmy Black. As the senior point guard, Black quarterbacked the Tar Heels through one of the school's greatest seasons. He has the third-highest all-time assist total at the school and ended his career as an outstanding defensive player.

Al Wood

Sam Perkins

Mitch Kupchak

Other starters on that national championship team were Matt Doherty, Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan. Doherty was a perfect role player for the Tar Heels. Whatever needed to be done, he was capable of doing it—whether that meant a big defensive play, an important basket or a perfectly executed pass. He and Davis are two of just three ACC players who finished their careers with 1,000 points, 400 rebounds and 400 assists.

Perkins ranks as Carolina's second-leading all-time scorer and is the top rebounder in school history. A brilliant defensive player, he was one of the biggest stars on the 1984 U.S. Olympic Team. But, that was to be expected. Perkins always seemed to be at his best in the biggest games. Some of his top performances at Carolina came against opponents with names like Sampson, Tisdale, Olajuwon and Ewing.

Jordan was the unanimous 1984 National Player of the Year after being named the country's top player in 1983 by The Sporting News. A 6-6 guard, Jordan was capable of dominating a game both offensively and defensively. It was his jump shot with 17 seconds to play which gave the Tar Heels the winning points in the 1982 NCAA Finals. He followed that up with more last-minute heroics during his next two seasons, was the leading scorer on the 1984 U.S. Olympic Team and then won NBA Rookie of the Year honors in 1985, leading the league in total points scored.

The number one pick in last summer's NBA draft was Brad Daugherty, who had an outstanding four-year career in Chapel Hill. Daugherty left Carolina as the school's fourth-leading all-time rebounder and seventh-leading scorer. A great inside scoring threat, he broke Bobby Jones' career field goal accuracy mark with a percentage of 61.99.

Daugherty, thus, is the latest in a long line of outstanding athletes who have helped make the Carolina basketball program what it is today—the best in the college game.

The Smith Center

North Carolina began play last season in its new basketball home—the 21,444-seat Smith Center. The seven sellout crowds which saw the first games there were introduced to perhaps the finest basketball arena in the world.

Built with more than $38 million in private gifts and pledges, the Center is a tribute to the basketball program put together by the man whose name it bears, Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith.

In a time when intercollegiate athletics is faced with many problems, this building stands as a symbol of what is good in the games students play and the fact that success is possible in sports without compromising academic integrity. That's the way Smith has run his program in Chapel Hill.

Construction began August 1, 1982 and the building opened its doors last January 18 against Duke.

More than 20,000 cubic yards of rock were blasted out of the earth to provide a spot for the Smith Center and 18,500 cubic yards of concrete were poured into that shell. Over 1,800 tons of structural steel suspend a 250,000 square foot roof. The building occupies 300,000 square feet over seven and a half acres. The great tan octagonal structure is 340 feet by 380 feet, the difference being the variance between the length and width of the high-tech varsity court.

The concourse level is 1,200 feet around and naturally lighted through tinted glass. On the level below are the basketball offices, ticket office, administrative offices and a sports memorabilia room.

The lowest level contains the arena floor, the pool deck in the adjacent natatorium and the locker room areas.

While the Smith Center is versatile enough to handle almost any event, it was planned and built for basketball. The game was the top priority for contributors and designers.

The building features a north-south playing court and three east-west courts for practice. The main floor is the most advanced basketball surface in existence. The maple court is a permanent installation and carries the familiar Carolina Blue map of the state as its centerpiece.

The floor itself is a seven-inch deep court, containing hundreds of arched metal springs. The springs have been placed every 16 inches in one direction and every three feet in the other. A 4 × 4 wooden beam is bolted to the top of the springs. A one-inch platform of plywood is on top of that, followed by the maple planks.

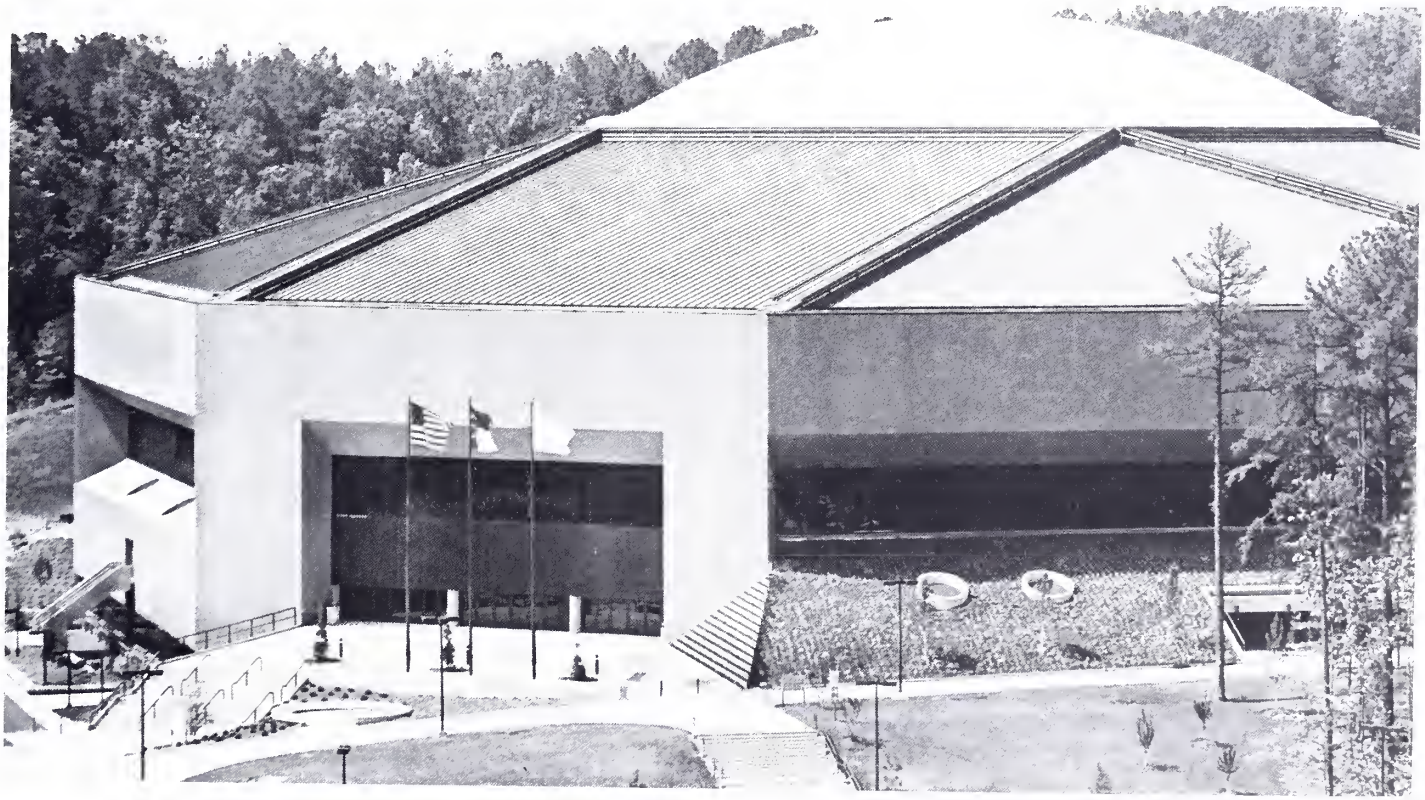
The result is resilience. The floor is capable of a one-eighth inch "give" when several players create pressure in the same area. The springs are closer together under the basket where traffic is the heaviest.

This Spring-Aire court system was patented almost a decade ago, but has not been marketed until recently, making Carolina's one of a kind. The floor's complexity, comfort level, safety features and cost are all by-products of its permanence. The same floor system would be used by all NBA teams except that their floors must be temporary because of the nature of the arenas in which they play.

Spectators, because of the octagonal shape, are all directly facing the main court, no seat more than 150 feet from the action. Lighting is computer-programmed and single-switched controlled from a command booth in the arena's west end. The lights, arrayed in rings similar to those in modern baseball stadiums, range in wattage from 1,500 to 2,000.

The sound equipment in the Center includes a concession to non-basketball events, what might be called a "personal speaker" system. The $455,000 package includes a main speaker cluster hanging from the ceiling and 14 "satellite" clusters, sufficient to serve basketball. But, there are also 146 small speakers mounted beneath the lip of the upper deck to enhance the sound at concerts.

There are four scoreboards mounted on the upper deck facing. There are also two digital message boards, 29 feet long with four-color capabilities.



The basketball floor is the basement of the Center and rests on rock interspersed with natural springs. Thirty feet down, there is a massive system of pipes and pumps to protect against floods.

Every seat in the building is a chair seat and all have springs to retract the seat portion. Each is Carolina Blue and many of them are fully upholstered.

There are 375 linear feet of electronically-controlled doors in the Center and the concourse is 22 feet wide.

The office level contains more than 3,000 square feet of space. The offices are impeccably decorated, including parquet floors in some areas.

There are 20 major components in the building's overhead steel, the trusses seven feet deep, the beams 120 to 198 feet long. This supports the Center's 15,000-square-foot, Teflon-coated fiberglass roof.

This roof, two layers one-eighth inch thick and stiff enough for a man to walk on, allows the building to rely solely on natural light during daily use. However, its primary value is to reduce the complexity of supporting massive overhead weight.

The natatorium part of the facility houses a 50-meter, eight-lane Olympic pool and diving facilities. Two three-meter boards and two one-meter boards are available for use. Special bulkheads separate the pool into diving and swimming areas.

Also located in the pool portion of the Center are the offices of the Educational Foundation, which supervised the fundraising for the complex, and a large Donors' Room. The Donors' Room, bigger than the main ballroom of the Carolina Inn on campus, will be used for pre-game and post-game activities.

The building's exterior, especially the tan fascia panels made of aggregate from a quarry in South Carolina, helps it blend into its natural surroundings. Nearby groves of trees have been saved to mitigate the building's bulkiness. More than 15,000 plants are on the grounds. There is an underground automatic sprinkler system and thousands of square feet of bricked walkways.

All of these features have made the Smith Center unique among basketball arenas. It is a special building to many people and great care has been taken to make everyone aware of that.

Editor's note: Much of the copy in this story has been lifted directly from a piece written by Alfred T. Hamilton, Jr. for CAROLINA COURT. The University appreciates CAROLINA COURT making this information available for this publication.

The Smith Center Jersies

Twelve basketball jersies hang in the Smith Center, recognizing the accomplishments of those who wore them. Six of the jersies have been retired as they belonged to men who were named National Player of the Year. The other six are honoring players who were two-time first-team All-Americas.

The jersies are numerals worn by Cartwright Carmichael and Jack Cobb and the numbers 10 (Lennie Rosenbluth), 12 (Phil Ford), 20 (George Glamack), 23 (Michael Jordan), 31 (Mike O'Koren), 32 (Billy Cunningham), 33 (Charlie Scott), 41 (Sam Perkins), 44 (Larry Miller) and 52 (James Worthy).

Cartwright Carmichael

Carolina's first All-America in any sport... Won first-team basketball All-America honors in 1923 and 1924... A three-time All-Southern Conference selection in 1922-23-24... Played on two Southern Conference championship teams... Member of the undefeated 1924 team which was voted national champion with a 26-0 record... Played on three teams with a cumulative record of 55-7... Captain of the 1922 squad... Regarded as an excellent shooter in his time... Also lettered in baseball as an outfielder.

Jack Cobb

National Player of the Year in 1926... A three-time All-America selection (1924-25-26)... Phil Ford and Sam Perkins are the only other three-time first-team choices in school history... Played on the 26-0 national championship team of 1924 and served as team captain the following season... Averaged 15 points a game in his three varsity seasons at a time when most teams were barely scoring 30... Member of the Helms Hall of Fame and the state of North Carolina's Sports Hall of Fame.

George Glamack 20

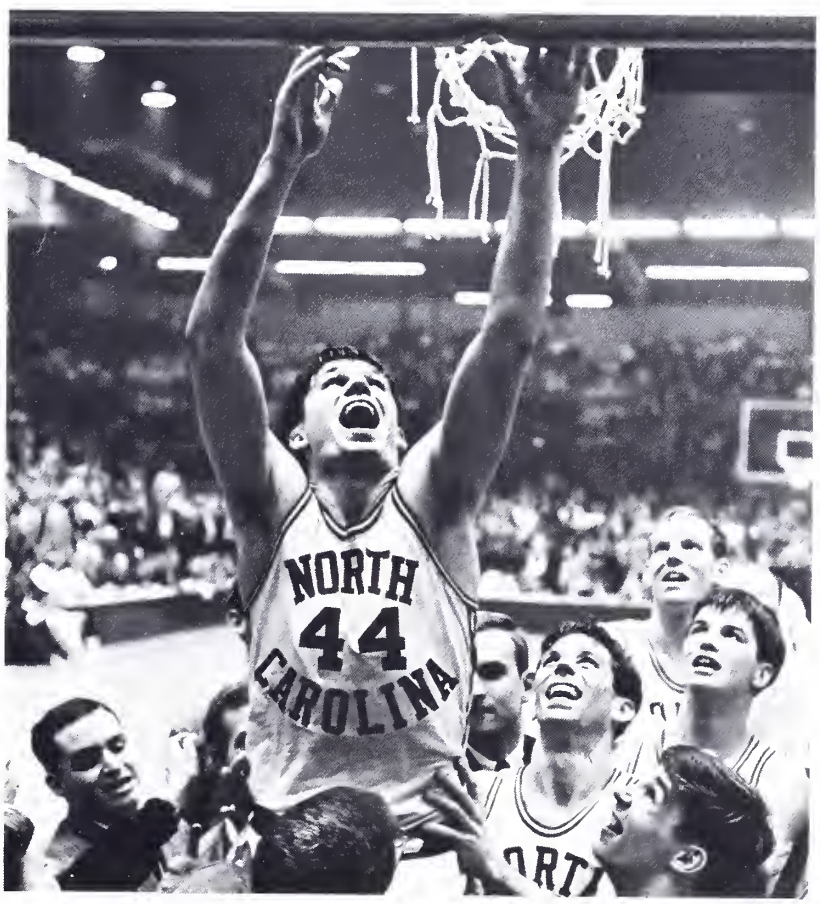
Selected National Player of the Year in both 1940 and 1941... Twice All-Southern Conference and All-America... Played on a Southern Conference championship team in 1940 and was team captain the following season... Had poor eyesight and was known as "The Blind Bomber"... But, was excellent at positioning himself inside for good shots... Had an accurate hook shot with either hand... Averaged 20.6 points a game, an amazing figure for the Forties... Scored a career-high 45 points against Clemson during his senior season... Scored 31 points against Dartmouth in his final college game, a 60-59 loss in the NCAA Tournament.

Lennie Rosenbluth 10

National Player of the Year in 1957... Scored a school-record 28.0 points a game that season as Carolina went 32-0 and won the NCAA championship... Three-time All-Atlantic Coast Conference selection... ACC Player and Athlete of the Year in 1957... Opened his memorable final season with a school-record 47 points in the first game against Furman... Scored an ACC Tournament-record 45 points in an opening round win over Clemson... His three-point play then lifted Carolina past Wake Forest in the tournament semi-finals, 61-59... Had 38 points in the finals against South Carolina... Scored 31 points against Michigan State in the NCAA semi-finals and 20 in the championship game with Kansas... His 2,045 career point total is still the third highest in school history... His career scoring average of 26.9 is the best ever at Carolina.

Billy Cunningham 32

Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year in 1965... Three-time All-ACC selection and twice a first-team All-America... Known as "The Kangaroo Kid" for his leaping ability... At 6-5½, he led the ACC in rebounding three times... Grabbed a school-record 16.1 rebounds per game in 1963... Averaged 15.8 and 14.3 the next two years... Also topped the league in scoring twice, at 26.0 in 1964 and 25.4 in 1965... Still the second-leading rebounder in Carolina history and the school's 12th-leading scorer... Had a career scoring average of 24.8 and a three-year rebounding average of 15.4... Twice named to the All-ACC Tournament team despite not getting to play in the finals either year... Carolina's MVP three straight seasons... Team captain in 1965... Academic All-America.



Larry Miller 44

Two-time All-America selection and Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year in 1967 and 1968... ACC Athlete of the Year in 1968... Led Carolina to ACC titles and the Final Four in 1967 and 1968... Had scoring averages of 20.9 as a sophomore, 21.9 as a junior and 22.4 as a senior... A great clutch player... Only 6-4, he was a tremendous offensive rebounder... Still the sixth-leading scorer and seventh-leading rebounder in school history... Once scored in double figures in 69 consecutive games, still a school record... One of only two players ever to be named the MVP in the ACC Tournament twice... Played one of the greatest games in Tournament history in the 1967 finals against Duke, hitting 13 of 14 from the field and scoring 32 points, as Carolina won, 82-73... Named to the NCAA all-regional teams in 1967 and 1968 and to the all-tournament team at the 1968 Final Four.

Charlie Scott

Three-time All-Atlantic Coast Conference choice and a first-team All-America in 1969 and 1970... Fifth-leading scorer in school history and also ranks 10th in assists and 15th in rebounding... Led the ACC in scoring in 1970 at 27.1 and had a career scoring mark of 22.1... All-ACC Tournament selection in 1968 and 1969... Tournament MVP in 1969... Hit 17 of 23 shots from the floor and scored 40 points in the finals against Duke that season, bringing Carolina from a 43-34 halftime deficit to an 85-74 victory... That's still the scoring record for the ACC Finals... Hit a last-second shot to beat Davidson in the 1969 East Regionals, sending the Tar Heels to a third straight Final Four... Played on the 1968 U.S. Olympic Team... Academic All-America in 1970.

National Player of the Year in 1978... Three-time first-team All-America in 1976-77-78... Finished his career as the all-time Carolina leader in scoring (2,290 points) and assists (753)... Thus, had a direct hand in 3,796 points... Holds school record of 14 assists in a game... Shot over 51 percent from the field in each of his four seasons, averaging 16.4, 17.5, 18.7 and 20.8... Named ACC Tournament MVP as a freshman in 1975, leading Tar Heels to conference championship... Averaged 23.6 points in four years of ACC Tournament play, making 51 of 58 free throws... Led Carolina to three straight first-place ACC finishes in 1976-77-78... Scored a career-high 34 points in his final home game to lift Carolina to a victory over Duke that clinched first place on the last day of the 1978 season... ACC Athlete of the Year in 1977 and 1978... A four-year starter from the first game of his freshman season... A 1976 Olympian.

Mike O'Koren

Won first-team All-America honors in 1979 and 1980... Solid all-around player who ranks among school leaders in scoring (11th), rebounding (ninth) and assists (ninth)... Led the Atlantic Coast Conference in field goal percentage as a sophomore (64.3) and ranked second nationally... A four-year starter who was outstanding down the stretch of his freshman season... Scored 21 points in the 1977 ACC Tournament finals against Virginia, leading a Carolina victory... Then had a career-high 31 points in the NCAA semi-finals against Nevada-Las Vegas... All-ACC Tournament selection in 1977 and 1979... Had a sensational game against Duke as a junior with 17 points, 20 rebounds, seven assists and four steals... Also held Blue Devil star Gene Banks scoreless in the second half of that game... Co-captain of the 1979 U.S. Pan American Team.

James Worthy

Led Carolina to a 32-2 record in 1982 and the NCAA championship... All-America and co-National Player of the Year... Scored a career-high 28 points in the NCAA Finals against Georgetown, making 13 of 17 field goal attempts, in a 63-62 victory... MVP in the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament that season and also in the East Regionals... Also had been outstanding in the 1981 ACC Tournament and the West Regional, sparking Carolina to the Final Four... Great inside player who was also a fine passer... A starter as a freshman... Saw his initial season cut short by a broken ankle... Came back to average 14.2 points as a sophomore and finish third in the ACC in rebounding... After discussions with Coach Dean Smith, he passed up his senior year and became the number one selection in the 1982 NBA draft.

One of three Carolina players to be named first-team All-America three times (others are Jack Cobb and Phil Ford)... Also a three-time All-Atlantic Coast Conference selection in those same seasons—1982-83-84... ACC Rookie of the Year in 1981 and the MVP of the conference tournament... Also named to the All-West Regional Team as Carolina advanced to the Final Four... Again won All-ACC Tournament and all-regional honors in 1982 as the Tar Heels swept to the NCAA championship... Also on the All-Final Four team... Had 25 points and 10 rebounds in the national semi-finals against Akeem Olajuwon and Houston... Always seemed to be at his best in the biggest games... Possessed a soft shooting touch at 6-9 and finished his career as the second-leading scorer in Tar Heel history... Carolina's all-time leading rebounder... Member of the U.S. Gold Medal-winning Pan American Team in 1983 and Olympic Team in 1984.

National Player of the Year in 1983 and 1984... Averaged 19.6 in 1984, shooting 55.1 percent from the field... Had a 20.0 scoring mark in 1983... Scored 13.5 points a game as a freshman and was the Atlantic Coast Conference Rookie of the Year... It was his 17-foot jump shot with 15 seconds to play that gave Carolina the winning points in its 63-62 victory over Georgetown in the NCAA championship game... Hero of numerous other come-from-behind victories during his career... Developed into an outstanding defensive player during his career... Had a steal and dunk to beat Virginia in a dramatic rally during the 1983 season... Shot 54.0 percent from the field during his career... Led the ACC in scoring in 1984... ACC Player and Athlete of the Year that season... Was the leading scorer on both the 1983 U.S. Pan American Team and the 1984 U.S. Olympic Team... After consulting with Coach Dean Smith, he passed up his final year of college eligibility to enter the NBA.

Tar Heels In International Competition

From Moscow to Mexico City, from London to Tokyo, University of North Carolina basketball players have traveled to the four corners of the globe over the past two decades showcasing their talents and, in many instances, leading the United States to unforgettable wins on the international level.

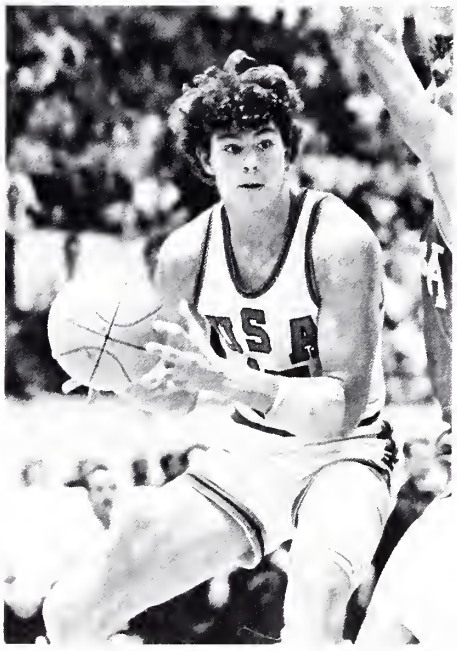
Indeed, Tar Heel stars, household names in American sports circles, have entertained millions of fans worldwide with their sparkling brand of play.

It has practically become a summertime tradition.

Carolina players seem to adjust with relative ease to the international game, where the rules are slightly different and the play more physical. The playmaking wizardry of a Charlie Scott, for example, or the eye-opening dunks of a Michael Jordan were just as amazing to Brazilians and Spaniards as they were to Atlantic Coast Conference rivals.

The most recent Tar Heel venture into international basketball came just last summer and was another major success. Kenny Smith, the dynamic senior guard on the current Carolina team, played a key role in the U.S. victory at the World Championships in Madrid last July.

Smith was the Americans' second-leading scorer for the tournament and had a game-high 23 points against the Soviet Union in the Gold Medal game. It was his driving lay-up over Soviet star Arvidas Sabonis with 15 seconds to play which proved to be the winning basket in an 87-85 victory.



Mitch Kupchak played in the 1973 World University Games in Moscow.

However, it has been in the Olympic Games, the world's most prestigious athletic gathering, where Carolina's basketball program has received the most international attention.

In fact, the last six U.S. Olympic teams have included at least one Tar Heel. Beginning with Larry Brown, who played on the 1964 Gold Medal-winning team in Tokyo, a total of 10 Carolina players have been honored as Olympians. Even Coach Dean Smith has been involved, guiding the 1976 U.S. squad to the Gold Medal in Montreal. That championship team included four Tar Heels—Mitch Kupchak, Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and Phil Ford. Smith has remained an important figure in international play, serving on numerous Olympic-related committees. Those have included selection committees for both players and coaches for various international events.

Jordan strung together two incredible weeks at the 1984 Summer Games, held in Los Angeles. A two-time National Player of the Year, he led the U.S. in scoring (17.1 ppg)—and in rave reviews.

Jordan, of course, wasn't the only Tar Heel to win critical acclaim in Los Angeles. Sam Perkins may not have been as spectacular as Jordan, but his play was nonetheless brilliant and his consistency unmatched.

Before the Games began, Jordan and Perkins were named U.S. co-captains. Their accomplishments in leading the U.S. to an eight-game sweep of the Gold Medal proved them more than worthy of that honor.

Despite the high scoring average, it was Jordan's mid-air magic that so often left opponents standing flat-footed, staring at him in disbelief.

His long jumpers and acrobatic moves thrilled the fans, delighted the news media and awed opposing coaches.

"Today he showed me nothing incredible," Spanish Coach Antonio Diaz-Miguel said after his team fell to the U.S. "He is always the same. He comes in there like an airplane. I don't know how he remains in the air when everybody else is going down. He is elastic."

Jordan's own teammates and coaches, though, were probably more impressed than anyone.

"I'm not sure anyone who watches the Olympics will be able to appreciate Jordan as much as our coaches and players do in practice," said George Raveling, a U.S. assistant coach. "One day, here in L.A., he made a move to the basket that just stunned the players. (Patrick) Ewing looked at (Wayman) Tisdale and just shook his head. He couldn't believe it."

Jordan was at his best in the first of two U.S. games versus Spain. He scored 24 points, sinking his last nine shots from the floor to finish 12 of 14. His steal and 35-foot jumper at the half-time buzzer gave the Americans a 46-41 lead. The U.S. blitzed the Spaniards in the second half to win, 101-68.

Perkins scored more than eight points a game and was America's third-leading rebounder during the Los Angeles fortnight. His inside defense was also outstanding.

Perhaps no one appreciated Perkins' talents more than U.S. Head Coach Bobby Knight, who repeatedly praised the three-time All-America. "Give me players like Sam Perkins," Knight said, "and I'll coach forever."

To no one's surprise, Jordan and Perkins were the American heroes in the Gold Medal game. Facing Spain for the second time, the U.S. romped, 96-65. Jordan scored 20 points on nine of 15 shooting, while Perkins had 12 points and seven rebounds.

Carolina's tradition of Olympic excellence, of course, had begun 20 years earlier with backcourt star Larry Brown. Charlie Scott represented the Tar Heels in 1968, when the U.S. swept to the title in Mexico City, and Bobby Jones was a member of the 1972 team, which settled for the Silver Medal amidst great controversy in Munich.

As a result of that disputed loss to the Soviet Union, there was tremendous pressure on the U.S. to recapture the Gold Medal in the 1976 Games. The Americans desperately needed the title to re-establish this nation's international basketball superiority and, in the meantime, to gain a little revenge against the Soviets.

This task fell upon the shoulders of Smith and his top aide at Carolina, Bill Guthridge. The four Tar Heels featured on the roster each played key roles in leading the Americans to a six-game sweep of the coveted Gold.

With Smith stressing aggressive defense and an unselfish offense, the U.S. routed Italy in the opening game. The Americans next encountered a fire-up Puerto-Rican team, but managed to avoid an upset thanks to Ford's clutch free-throw shooting in the final moments. The U.S. rolled into the finals by beating Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Canada. However, a much-anticipated rematch with the Soviets was not to be. Russia had been ousted by the Yugoslavian team in the semi-finals. In the championship, the U.S. defeated the Yugoslavs to reclaim the Gold Medal.

Because of the Olympic boycott, the U.S. did not compete in the 1980 Games in Moscow. Still, Carolina's Al Wood starred on the American squad that compiled a 5-1 record against professional teams in a series of exhibition games held across the country.

But Olympic achievements alone do not fully explain why Carolina has had such a strong impact on international basketball. There have been plenty of other outstanding performances.

The Tar Heels have been represented in the last four Pan American Games. Robert McAdoo played on the 1971 U.S. team, while Tommy LaGarde starred for the 1975 squad. Mike O'Koren co-captained the 1979 team that won the Gold Medal in Puerto Rico.

Perkins and Jordan teamed up in 1983, leading the U.S. to the title in Caracas. Perkins was regarded as the most consistent American player in that tournament. Jordan keyed a couple of comeback victories with the last-second heroics that Tar Heel fans became so accustomed to during his three years in Chapel Hill.

One year before his Pan American appearance, O'Koren was the starting forward for the U.S. in Gregarian Cup competition in Moscow. LaGarde journeyed into the Soviet Union as well, as a member of the U.S. Continental Cup team in 1975. That team also played games in Greece, Yugoslavia and other areas of Europe.

Dennis Wuycik played on the U.S. pre-Olympic team which toured Europe in 1971. In the summer of 1973, a Soviet national team came to America to meet a U.S. all-star team. Carolina's George Karl and Bobby Jones both played instrumental roles in that series. Later that summer, Karl became one of the first Americans in decades to visit China. He belonged to a U.S. team which played there and, again, he was outstanding.

Three Tar Heels have won Gold Medals at the World University Games—Billy Cunningham at Budapest in 1965, Larry Miller at Tokyo in 1967 and Kupchak at Moscow in 1973.

The summer after he helped Carolina win the 1982 NCAA championship, Jordan toured Europe on a U.S. all-star team. In 1983 Matt Doherty played on the U.S. Select Team in Southeast Asia. During that same summer Steve Hale played in Europe on a team sponsored by Athletes in action.

Two Tar Heels, Brad Daugherty in 1984 and Joe Wolf in 1985, have represented the U.S. in the William Jones Cup Tournament in Taiwan. Both played on American teams which went 9-0 and won the championship there.

Carolina's success across the seas, though, is more than a collection of fine individual efforts. On four occasions, the entire Tar Heel team has ventured to Europe for tournament competition.

In 1971, Carolina visited Madrid for the International Christmas Tournament. In claiming the championship, the Tar Heels swept past Brazil, Spain and Real Madrid, the European champion. The game against Real Madrid was televised across Europe, and Carolina responded with a brilliant all-around performance.

Smith took his team back to Madrid for the same tournament in 1974, but this time the Tar Heels were not as fortunate, falling to a veteran Real Madrid club in the championship. Carolina did spring a major surprise, however, defeating the powerful Cuban National Team on a remarkable half-court shot at the buzzer by Walter Davis.

London was the destination in 1979, as the Tar Heels entered their third international Christmas tournament of the decade. Prior to the 1984 season, Carolina visited Greece and won four games against teams from Italy and the host nation. A Perkins' steal that led to a last-second shot by Jordan clinched one win. Perkins, Jordan and Buzz Peterson were selected to the all-tournament team.

Many Carolina players have gone on to successful pro basketball careers in Europe. Doug Moe accomplished the most, three times earning European Player of the Year accolades. Other Tar Heels who have played professionally in Europe include Dave Chadwick, Kim Huband, Craig Corson, Donn Johnston, John O'Donnell, Donald Washington, Ed Stahl, Bill Chambers, Bruce Buckley, Tom Zaliagiris, Geff Crompton, Randy Wiel, Jeff Wolf, Rich Yonakor, Pete Budko, Tommy LaGarde, John Virgil, Chris Brust, Jeb Barlow, Steve Hale and Warren Martin.

It seems that Carolina's outstanding basketball tradition, so well-documented in the U.S., has virtually become a global affair.

The Educational Foundation

Moyer Smith

Neal Harrell

John Cherry

One of the most important organizations in the Carolina Athletic Department is the University's Educational Foundation.

It is the Educational Foundation which makes possible all athletic scholarships awarded by Carolina.

These scholarships, either partial or full, will go to 396 athletes. The scholarship budget has more than doubled in the last six years. The 1986–87 budget will be $2.1 million, of which approximately $800,000 will go to women's scholarships.

"Since its inauguration in 1938, the Foundation has provided scholarships, either partial or full, for over 4,000 student-athletes," says Ernie Williamson, the Foundation's executive vice-president.

Williamson feels the overall bonus of being a Foundation member is helping a worthy young student obtain a college education. He says the high caliber young athlete who is awarded a scholarship is a great representative of the University.

Any donation to the Foundation is welcome. However, membership in the Rams Club is restricted to those who contribute $150 or more.

Carolina was one of the first schools in the nation to set up an endowment program for athletics. This program was started in 1968 and has already surpassed the $12,000,000 mark.

The endowment program consists of $50,000 endowed scholarships— $50,000 endowed scholarships through insurance, life memberships, wills and bequests and a pooled income program.

The Foundation operates on a dignified and realistic plane in compliance with all of the regulations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Other members of the Foundation staff are Moyer Smith, John Cherry, Neal Harrell and Allen Morris. Along with Williamson, Mary Baggett, Wendy Mann, Terri Maynor, Jean May, and Dawn McPherson, they have made the Foundation better able to serve its members.

"We couldn't have the type program we do without the Educational Foundation," says Athletic Director John Swofford. "We've enlarged our staff in the last several years and I think the staff additions we have made will enable us to do a better job for our members."

The Foundation offices were moved to the Smith Center this fall in the north end of the natatorium. This additional space will help the Foundation staff better serve the membership.

Ernie Williamson

The man who stands at the helm of the Educational Foundation is popular Ernie Williamson, the executive vice-president.

The former star Carolina tackle is one of the most active individuals on the Tar Heel sports scene. He is constantly on the go—talking with Foundation members, speaking to prospective members or avidly following all of Carolina's athletic teams.

Williamson is a Carolina graduate with A.B. and M.A. degrees. The native of Crewe, Va. played one season of football here under Carl Snavely and was regarded as an outstanding tackle. He was lured away to professional football and played with New York and Washington before a knee injury ended his career.

Williamson returned to Chapel Hill to finish work on his degrees and then went to the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn. He was an assistant coach there for two years and head coach for three seasons.

He returned to Carolina in 1957 to accept his present position. At one time he also served as a recruiter for the football program.

Ernie is married to the former Elva Smith of Lawrenceville, Va. They have a son, Wayne, and a daughter, Carole.
